"The Wife" By Jane Phelps

MRS. CLAYBORNE ARRIVES; RUTH AND BRIAN MEET HER.

CHAPTER LXVIII.

The next day Ruth was visibly happy and excited.

"Something's happened! that fool husband of hers has been promising something; or doing something to make her happy." Arthur Mandel said to himself.

He was soon to know.

"Mr. Mandel, I am going to ask a favor," Ruth said during a lull in the morning's business.

"It is granted," he smiled at her.

"Wait until you know what it is," she returned. Her voice carried a joyous lilt. "I want to remain at home all day Saturday, please, unless you need me for something important."

"No, indeed! but may I ask what it is that is going to happen on Saturday? You look so happy. No one has left you a great fortune, have they, so making you leave me altogether?"

"Oh, no! my aunt, Mrs. Clayborne, who mothered me always, is coming." Then, impelled by the interest in his eyes fixed upon her, she added: "I know she wouldn't come because I displeased her by taking a position. She is a little old-fashioned in her ideas of what is proper for a woman to do! and while she has written me regularly, she has refused to visit me because of my work."

"No wonder you want Saturday. Don't you want Monday, as well?"

"No, thank you. She may as well get accustomed to the idea of having a working woman for a niece. But I thought it would be rather lonely if I left her to-morrow, as she does not get in until seven o'clock to-night."

"How would this do for a quickly-conceived plan? You work only mornings while she is here. Then you can lunch and shop and matinee together."

"That would be lovely! but—do you think you could spare me? She said in her letter she would only remain a few days."

"Didn't I propose it?" He was pleased that he could give her so much pleasure as he evidently had by his thoughtful arrangement.

"I am going to ask something more."

"Very well. It is also granted."

"If Aunt Louisa will—she may refuse, may I bring her into the shop some day, and let her see that my work isn't—degrading?" she had paused for a word, and they both smiled when she found one.

"I shall be delighted! and if she doesn't quite disapprove of the place, and so be prejudiced against the proprietor, perhaps you will allow me the pleasure of showing my respect by taking you both to lunch."

"That is being altogether too kind."

Ruth objected, but her eyes shone. It would be delightful for her aunt to be entertained even for one meal by a man who knew so well how to do things.

"It will be kind to me," he returned. "But we must not think too much about it! Your aunt may refuse to have anything to do with me or mine," he indicated the shop.

"She would not if she knew you." The words were spoken without thought, and Ruth blushed violently as she realized that perhaps Mandel would think they meant more than she had intended. But with his usual sang froid, he bowed and replied: "I hope she will be persuaded."

Ruth was delighted with the plan he had outlined for her. Her aunt never had been an early riser. Rachel would take her breakfast to her room long after she and Brian had left the house. Then her aunt would slowly dress—as was her custom—and amuse herself by reading, or taking a short walk until luncheon time. Then, too, she would have Rachel with her, and though Ruth knew the old negress would be questioned, she really had no fear she would tell anything that would hurt her.

Dinner was postponed that night until seven-thirty. Brian came home at the usual time and "liltivated up" as he called it.

"When a man's wife's relatives visit him, it's up to him to put his best foot forward," he laughingly remarked as he commenced to shave.

"You're a dear to think of it!" Ruth replied.

Just then the bell rang and some flowers were delivered to Rachel.

"Oh, Brian! how thoughtful!" Ruth exclaimed delighted, she had opened the box and then ran to kiss him.

"Be careful there!" he grumbled. "You'll make me cu myself."

The little apartment had quite a festive air as they left for the train. The very best linen and dishes had been used to make the table attractive; and the deep crimson dahlias gave just the touch the dining-room always needed—always. "Responded to," as Ruth expressed it.

The train was on time, and Mrs. Clayborne was pleased to be very loving toward Ruth; very gracious to Brian. Ruth consequently bubbled over with enthusiasm.

"Here we are!" she said to her aunt as the cab stopped at their door. "I do hope you will love my home."

To-morrow — Mrs. Clayborne graciously accepts Mr. Mandel's invitation.

EDITOR WOOD DEAD.

Cape Vincent Man Dies at Syracuse, N.Y.

C. B. Wood, proprietor of the Cape Vincent N.Y., Eagle, died on Friday following four days illness from influenza. He was aged sixty-three years and had conducted the Eagle for forty-one years, making it one of the best weeklies in Jefferson county. It was the only Democratic paper in the section. He died at the home of his sister in Syracuse, N.Y., whether he had been taken.

Mr. Wood was a bachelor. He was prominent in the fraternal life of the village, being a past master of Cape Vincent Lodge, No. 293, F. & A.M.; past high priest of Cape Vincent Chapter, No. 96, R.A.M., and a member of Watertown Commandery, No. 11, K.T., and of Media Temple, A.A.O.N.M.S., also a past noble grand of the Fraternity Union Lodge, No. 185, I.O.O.F., of this village, and a member of the Cape Vincent fire department. He had served as a member of the village Board of Education and as treasurer of the Cape Vincent Agricultural Society, one of the few remaining town fair societies in the state.

"Doc" Wood was genial and companionable and had a very wide circle of warm friends.

For thirty years Mr. Wood had as his foreman and associate worker L. Roy Allen who is now in charge of the office.

ALLIES AT POINT WHERE WAR BEGAN

Salonika, Nov. 11.—Allied troops have entered Sarajevo in Bosnia, according to an official statement issued by French headquarters here.

It was at Sarajevo that Archduke Franz Ferdinand, of Austria, was assassinated just prior to the outbreak of the great war.

SECRET BALLOT FOR HUMS.

Proportionate Representation Would Increase Social Democrats, Bern, Nov. 11.—The groups forming the majority of the German Reichstag, says a Berlin message, have agreed to present at the approaching session of that body a plan for election to the Reichstag and to the Lower Houses of the Confederated German States by equal, direct, secret ballot, following the principles of proportionate representation and all without distinction of sex.

The voting age is to be set at twenty-four years.

Proportionate representation in the Reichstag would give the Social Democratic party, on the basis of the last Reichstag elections, a large increase in membership in the legislative body.

Wah Tidings.

Germany's request for a statement of armistice terms marks the first time in history that a nation whose territory has not been invaded, begs for peace.

According to reliable authorities the Allies will not attempt to saddle their war bill on the Central Powers as one of the peace terms. The Huns, it is figured, will have enough to do to pay the indemnities that will be demanded.

Stole The Brandy.

A consignment of five gallons of brandy expressed from Kingston to Pembroke and changing cars at Renfrew was stolen from the C.P.R. station platform last Friday evening. Left alone for a minute or two, it vanished. One of the station staff saw a stranger walking off with the ardent spirits but supposed him to be carrying only what belonged to him.

Woman's hand in connection with her slipper has played a very important part in the work of civilization.

'67 YEARS OF GROWTH

IN the early days the founder of this business made a few gross of matches a day, and sold them himself, driving his horse and wagon as far as Toronto. Today, from automatic machines, 70,000,000 matches a day are turned out to keep Canada's home fires burning. And not matches alone: indurated fibreware, household helps, and a host of paper products have been added to this line.

The House of Eddy

has become an institution which touches the daily life of the Canadian public in a thousand different ways.

There is a reason back of this steady and consistent progress. Business institutions do not grow to such proportions by accident. It takes real merit to accomplish such a result; merit in the goods themselves, and in the concern which is back of them.

When you buy matches, see that Eddy's name is on the box. When you are in need of some of the familiar household helps, such as a washtub, a pail, or a washboard, remember that there is an Eddy product which will fill your needs, made from light and durable Indurated Fibreware. Remember also that Eddy's Paper Specialties are standard.
