Keep the Bowels Regular And You Won't be Sick

If the bowels do not move regularly, they will sooner or later, become constipated, and constipation is productive of more ill-health than almost any other trouble.

The sole cause of constipation is an inactive liver, and unless the liver is kept active, you may be sure that headaches, piles, heartburn, biliousness, jaundice, floating specks before the eyes, and many other troubles will follow the wrong action of this, one of the most important organs of the body.

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills will regulate the bowels so that you will have a free and easy motion every day, and one pill a night for thirty days will cure the worst cases of constipation.

They do this by acting directly on the liver and making the bile pass through the bowels instead of allowing it to get into the blood, thus causing many stomach and bowel troubles.

Mrs. Jos. Labrec, Louise Apts., Calgary, Alta., writes:—"I have been troubled with constipation for the last two years. I have tried numerous treatments, but have never been relieved by anything until I used Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills which are helping me wonderfully."

We do not claim that Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are a "cure-all," but we do claim that there is nothing better for a sluggish liver.

Price 25c a vial at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Cheaper to Buy a Good Shampoo than New Hair

Dandruff is the primary cause of falling hair. This disagreeable condition of the scalp and hair glands is almost certain to cause temporary or permanent baldness.

Loss of hair may also be ascribed to the use of improper shampoos containing irritating substances, animal oils and alcohol, any of which may produce gradual decay of the hair.

Don't use a stale liquid preparation that contains too much alkali (a harmful irritant) & the sure, safest and easiest way is to make your own liquid. Buy a carton of Vellor at any drug store. Dissolve one of the small packets into half glass of fresh water and you will have an abundance of non-injurious liquid that will relieve itching of the scalp, falling hair and dandruff also improve the natural color of the hair. Vellor being in concentrated form never spoils and will keep forever.

KINGSTON'S MEMORABLE CELEBRATION ON MONDAY

lives, and we at home must do our bit. Lend your money to help the cause.

American Consul Johnston.

Following Mr. Nickle's address the bands played several patriotic airs, and as F. S. Johnston, "United States Consul, was introduced the bands struck up "The Star Spangled Banner," and this was the signal for another outburst of applause. It was several minutes before Mr. Johnston had a chance to speak, so great was the enthusiasm.

Mr. Johnston said he was more than pleased at having the opportunity of joining the citizens of Kingston in their celebration. He spoke of the friendship existing between Canada and the United States, and expressed the hope that this friendship had been cemented for all time to come. Mr. Johnston was loudly cheered at the close of his address.

Other Speakers.

Prayers of thanksgiving were offered by Rev. J. W. Stephen and Rev. T. DeCourcy Rayner at different parts of the square. Dean Starr, T. J. Rigney, Dr. J. W. Adams, M.P., Francis King and W. Y. Mills gave appropriate addresses, and all of the speakers, while paying tributes to the dead, the maimed, and the bereaved, exhorted their hearers to carry on and support the government with money needed to finish the great task of demobilization and reconstruction. After four years of sacrifice and devotion, the people of Canada were not going to refuse to loan their money when it was urgently needed to maintain the prosperity of the country.

Ever afterwards, Mr. Johnston emphasized the Victory Loan, and showed the great necessity for general response on the part of the people who were able to buy bonds. Nobody can foresee what is going to take place in the field of investments, but one thing was certain—the Victory Bonds offered a sound and safe investment to-day, and no one need hesitate for a moment to buy the bonds.

Francis King's Address.

Francis King, in his address, told the crowd that was not only the greatest event of their lives or of the country, but the biggest thing that had happened in the Christian era—since two thousand years ago the shepherds heard the angels sing "Peace on earth and good will to men." We were not only celebrating the victory of our arms, the return of our boys. We were celebrating the downfall of Prussianism—the defeat of the Beast of Berlin—the triumph of democracy over autocracy—and at the same time, and this was the real thing, the triumph of right over might—of honor over dishonor—and the whole world was on the winning side. "Our faith in humanity comes back, and our hearts overflow with thankfulness." But he urged that the men who had brought us over the top should not be forgotten. "Bring them safe home again. Keep the factories open for them. Keep the wheels turning for them." He referred to the long process of demobilization, and healing, and recovery, and urged that peace, or no peace, Canada must be financed and helped to pay her "glorious debt."

"Are you bearing your share of this?" Don't be content with buying a Victory Bond. Buy till you know what sacrifice is. Buy till you feel the pinch. Buy, he urged, not only because peace vastly increases the value of the investment so that you can scarcely talk of sacrifice, but buy because peace a thousandfold increases your desire to be "in on this"—to help—and to share in the triumphant success of the nation's effort. He concluded with a plea again for a real sacrifice so

Cars, Trucks, Etc.

Then came the procession of decorated cars and trucks, every one loaded with jubilant celebrants. The leading truck was occupied by the Victory Loan choir, which sang its hardest all evening, and continued its appeals to the people to "buy bonds, buy bonds, for your boy and mine." Every car following them was crowded with singers, and they certainly made their voices heard, often with more noise than music. There were hundreds of cars in the procession, and they vied with each other in the display of flags and in noise-making schemes. In one car were three men carrying double-barreled shotguns which they discharged at intervals, adding to the noise. Even the staid and solemn city clergy could not restrain themselves, for mounted on one truck filled with noisy, enthusiastic children was the Rev. T. DeCourcy Rayner, and he certainly seemed to be in his element. A truck arranged by a number of citizens from Rideau Ward attracted much attention. On it was a figure of a big boche, with his arms in the air, in the act of shouting "Kamarad" to a couple of soldiers who had their rifles leveled at him. When followed car after car until it seemed as if the procession would never end.

The parade went up Princess street and along Barrie, then the greater part of it turned around and came back down Princess. The stream of cars passed up and won the street time and again, and the crowds remained to cheer and sing until a very late hour. The afternoon parade was a great success, but the evening brought the celebrations to a glorious climax. Kingston came out of its shell, and astonished itself and proved that Kingstonians can celebrate in great style when occasion calls for it. The doings of the evening will live for generations in the memory of those who witnessed the parade, and Peace Day will be a day to be remembered in the Limestone City.

Celebration Notes.

The windows of the Whig office were crowded all evening. The big office on the market square was an ideal point of vantage from which to watch the big doings in front of the City Hall.

Many citizens were heard to remark during the day that this did not seem a bit like Kingston. The Limestone City has a reputation for being cold-hearted and slow to be aroused, but the glorious news lit them up, and the citizens to a man celebrated in a fashion worthy of many a larger city.

While the celebrations were in full swing on Monday, a party of returned soldiers were heard to discuss whether Kingstonians would have a similar reception when our boys came marching home. It is to be hoped that they will, and that the citizens will first get in the same way to welcome home her heroes.

that Kingston might not fall in reaching its objective. It we could just get the Kaiser's head under the big picture above the shambles, his hands would go also. He felt sure we would not fall.

The bonfires and fireworks display were all that could be desired. They were operated under the personal direction of Fire Chief Armstrong, and there were no accidents of any kind.

The Parade Starts.

After the speechmaking was over and the crowd had joined in singing the National Anthem, the procession formed up and marched off amidst scenes of the wildest enthusiasm. The huge crowd of spectators hurried uptown to line the route, and the bands, cars and other units in the parade marched off in succession. A locomotive from the Locomotive Works had been put on the car tracks, and it added a great deal to the general pandemonium. The streets were crowded as never before. The afternoon parade seemed tame in comparison, and only a narrow lane was left in the throng of people to permit the passage of the procession. And all along the route the noise was deafening. Cheers and counter-cheers rose and fell as the bands and the troops in the parade passed by. Princess street was impassable, and the people crowded right to the edge of the car tracks.

The parade was headed by the band of the R. C. H. A., which played almost all the morning, and the strains of the music thousands of Kingstonians marched along, performing all sorts of antics. Staid old men danced along the streets like children, and women of mature years mounted on trucks and joined in the rejoicing by singing and waving flags. Immediately after the band came a young man in clown's costume, pulling along behind him an effigy of the Kaiser, with a rope around his neck. The next item was a truck full of soldiers, with Major McManus as the leader of the big noise they were making, and they certainly used their lungs to good purpose. They were followed by the parade of Queen's students, led by the ladies, and bearing banners bearing various devices. The students were full of enthusiasm, but not a bit disorderly, and "marched along, fifteen score strong, great-hearted young people, singing their songs." Many of them were in uniform, showing that they had been "over there," and had taken a part in bringing about the great victory they were celebrating.

After the student body had passed, the Salvation Army band came in sight. The band had labored nobly all day. They were on the scene outside the Whig office a few moments after the news of peace was received in the morning, and played for hours, leading the processions on Princess street all forenoon, and taking part in the afternoon parade. But their energy seemed to be unlimited, for they were there in the evening as strong and lusty in their efforts as ever. They were followed by a large party of the Great War Veterans' Association, led by their own band. They were out in large numbers, and the crowd gave them a rousing reception, as they richly deserved. Some of the veterans were in uniform, while others were in their civilian clothes, and wore their war service buttons. Following them, on a fire truck from the Brock street fire hall, came the Roman Catholic school cadet band, adding to the music and the noise all along the way.

Who are still "over there."

It was indeed good to see the manner in which the officers and men fraternized amongst the veterans in the parade. There was no sign of that autocratic militarism which characterizes the relations between the officers and men of the defeated German army. That great spirit of comradeship.
