

SUGGESTED WAR TITLES

WHAT ABOUT "THE WAR OF THIRTY-TWO NATIONS?"

A Writer Suggests a Number of Titles—"The Great War" is the Present Most Common One.

The foxey King Ferdinand of Bulgaria has found that his future glance was cast on the wrong apple and he has withdrawn from the war; unconditional surrender summarizes the ignominious terms of armistice which the unspeakable Turk has been forced to accept; the dynasty of the Hapsburgs has crumbled and the panic-stricken Austrians and Hungarians have clamored for peace at any price; the unmistakably outspoken principles enunciated by President Wilson have caused the abdication of God's self-imposed tsar, Kaiser Wilhelm Hohenzollern.

In the midst of such world-transforming events with the outstanding statesmen of the allied countries convened in Versailles to formulate a basis for peace, the temptation arises to conjecture what history will name the carnage of the past four years.

When the war drums have ceased to throb, when the messages of destruction belched from the cannon mouths have been stilled, when the soldiers who fought the great fight have once more returned to their hearths and loved ones, what shall the historians entitle the prodigious struggle which has torn the world with anguish during the past four years?

Thousands of passing articles, fleeting pamphlets and ponderous volumes have explained every phase of the cataclysm and the world has accepted no one title by which it may be known.

The Great War, is familiar to every Canadian because of the formation of the Great War Veterans' Association and to Englishmen as the Comrades of the Great War. It is too conventional for the stupendous nature of the conflict.

Up to the present there have been practically the only names that have been suggested despite the fact that there are many others that might be chosen by the historians to designate it.

This terrible scourge leaves in its wake weak hearts, shattered nerves, impoverished blood, and a general run-down, debilitated condition of the system.

Thousands of people throughout Canada are just now needing the timely use of made formal declarations of war and nine have severed diplomatic relations without actual hostilities.

But why name the conflict by the trite term of war which has been used since time immemorial? In its stead call it "The Shattered Dream" or even "The Great Illusion" which will be expressive to future generations of the hallucination of the Kaiser that his "divinity" as German Emperor would enable him to invoke the aid of God in his plan to erect on the smoking ruins of trampled civilization a World Dominion.

"Civilization's Conflict" is an alliterative appellation which might be employed "The Clash of Ideals" if one were more materialistic.

"The European Holocaust" would indicate the devastation wrought by the clash. "Armageddon" is perhaps anticipatory of the war of universal peace when the parliament of man shall be established in a world federation of democracies.
