THEATRICAL

At the Strand.
Again the Strand forges to the front with an all-star programme for Thursday, Friday and Saturday. The featured play will be "The Trap," starring Alice Brady, the production was staged in a quaint fisher village, and the scenes are among the most beautiful ever seen on the screen. Miss Brady appears in the role of Doris Shaw, the daughter of a fanatical fisherman. When the rough fisher lad, who is in love with her sees her become interested in a stranger, he frames up a trap whereby it appears that she is not only indifferent but bad. Doris' father casts her from his home. For the extra feature we offer a new star to Kingstonsians, Belle Bennett, in "The Lonely Woman," a masterpiece of characterization dealing with the wonderful faith of a woman in her husband who has been sentenced to Sing Sing, though innocent. It is more than a gripping heart pulsing play of emotion—it is a call to faith. The usual comedy reels will be shown, also new music by the Strand orchestra.

"Cinderella."
One of the novel song numbers of F. Stuart-Whyte's latest English pantomime "Cinderella," is the tuneful "Vampires of Then and Now," which is sung with terrific success by Miss Zara Clinton and ten beautiful girls. Mr. Whyte has built a special setting for this song alone, and has provided three thousand dollars' worth of costumes for it. The setting represents a picture gallery in the home of Prince Charming. Upon the walls are five large oil paintings of famous vampires of old, Delilah, Salome, Cleopatra, Neil Gwynne and Mary Queen of Scots. As the song proceeds the pictures come to life, and the famous characters come down upon the stage. Here they meet five present day vampires arrayed like birds of paradise, playing their art in the modern way. The five ancient beauties decide that they are outclassed by the "baby" vamps of old Broadway, and return again to their frames to dream of former conquests when the game was played according to Hoyle. The music for this song was written by a Canadian officer, Lieut. B. C. Hilliam, while the words are by F. Stuart-Whyte. "Cinderella" will be the offering at the Grand Opera House for Friday and Saturday.
