

THEATRICAL.

Military Matters

At The Grand.

These two stars of first magnitude are the attraction at the Grand to-night, and the drawing power of those two names ought to pack the house at every performance. Bryant Washburn will have the leading role in "Kiddier & Ko," which was his best release under the Pathe management. This popular star takes the part of a young college man who is inclined to be sporty at times, but there is some change in his habits when his father takes a hand. He makes him go into the codfish business, but he enters it in a new way and the way he bullies up an enormous business through breeziness and a smile will make you roar with laughter. And then there is also Charlie Chaplin in a two reel comedy called "Triple Trouble," and his many new actions will be well worth seeing. There will also be the Pathe News, a Jutty Brown story and Hopkins and Cramer with their novel dancing and instrumental act will complete this excellent evening's entertainment. Don't forget this big special programme.

"General Post."

One thousand four hundred returned men laughed uproariously at "General Post," with Thomas A. Wise and Edward H. Robins, when this charming comedy was enjoying its recent four weeks' run at the Royal Alexandra Theatre, Toronto, especially appealing to the boys. Its brilliant dialogue and situations make "General Post," which will play the Grand Opera House on Saturday, Dec. 7th, matinee and night, a rare treat, have nothing to do with war, and it has all the comedy element that has grown out of the great struggle. The all important comedy scenes are made doubly effective by the extraordinary fine acting of Edward H. Robins. In the character of Smith, the tailor, Mr. Robins makes a very difficult role balance the portrait contributed by Mr. Wise. The tailor, who is metamorphosed into a general, becomes in Mr. Robins' keeping a sincere and manly figure, a lover who justifies the world's alleged affection for victims of cupid, and a very natural, simple and human being.

At Griffin's.

In an outdoor play, with the big timber country for a canvas and with the lives of the lumberjacks for atmosphere, Wallace Reid, the ever-popular star, is ideally cast. This is exceptionally the case in "The Source," his latest starring vehicle, displayed at Griffin's. Dainty Lila Lee, the "Star" discovery of filmdom, will also be seen in her first starring vehicle, "The Cruise of the Make-Believes," and if her work in "The Cruise of the Make-Believes" is fair evidence of the sort of acting she is to give us in later screen plays, it is safe to assume that she will soon find her way to the hearts of thousands of admirers, and will be known as one of the prettiest and most popular little actresses of the screen. These two exceptional features are sure to please and should not be overlooked by lovers of the best in motion pictures.

At The Strand.

Twelve young men, picked by May Allison for her Metro play, "The Return of Mary," because of fine looks and good dancers, decided that they would go "over the top" together and so stormed the recruiting station at Hollywood, Cal., where they were all accepted by Uncle Sam. They will be seen in the ballroom and dinner scenes in this picture, the attraction at the Strand Theatre to-night. Miss Allison considered these twelve young men a considerable "find." She was naturally disappointed when she found that they had all deserted her in a bunch but decided that she admired them more for their fighting and patriotic spirit than their dancing, and would rather see them in khaki than in conventional evening clothes. Be sure and take in the Strand to-night.

Major H. Graham Starr, a graduate of the Royal Military College has been appointed Assistant Provost Marshal at Toronto. He was wounded in service in September, 1916.

A militia department official says: "It must be remembered that in handling large bodies of troops over the I.C.R., with the long stretches of single track, delays are to be expected. The public should not be too prone to blame the militia department without first ascertaining all the facts. The militia department is having its own trouble in securing railway equipment enough to handle the large bodies of troops which will be arriving almost daily. It must not be forgotten also that trains have to be provided for the demobilization of men already in Canada."

Some months ago Major-General McDougall was appointed to special duties in connection with the registration of man power and his work took him to every military district, where all establishments were overhauled with a view to the removal of men in category "A" from clerical work and their replacement by those returned from overseas. His visit to Kingston has been anticipated for some time, and he will be engaged in an investigation of all departments. There have been statements circulated to the effect that these departments were overmanned and that sinecures were held by officers and others who had never been to the front. The presence of Gen. McDougall in Kingston will afford an opportunity for those possessing information to lay it before him for investigation.
