

Books And Their Authors

"Go, Little Books."

A preface to a first book of poems. Go, little book, the world is wide, There's room and verge enough for thee; For thou hast learned that only pride Lacketh for opportunity, Which comes unbid to modesty.

SUICIDE OF MONARCHY.

By Eugene de Schelking. 327 pages. Price, $2.00. The McMillan Company, Toronto, publishers. This book, one of the most remarkable documents dealing with the European chaos, after being held up by the censor for nearly a year, has at last been published.

It begins with a short chapter reviewing the reign over Russia of Alexander III, as a necessary introduction. It shows how after his death Emperor William of Germany became the dominant figure around which the whirlpool of diplomatic intrigue swept.

WAR POEMS.

By Lyman C. Smith, Cornwall, Ontario. For private circulation. The British Whig Publishing Company, Kingston, publishers.

It has been the good fortune of the Whig Publishing Company to produce what is without doubt one of the finest selections of war poetry that has ever been written.

This small book, which is produced in very fine style, with a most original design, is made up of one long poem entitled "The Kaiser Abdicates," and two shorter ones, entitled "The Kaiser" and "Why Were Ye Silent?"

"OUT OF THE SILENCE."

By Mary E. Waller, McClelland, Goodchild & Stewart, Toronto, publishers. 954 pages. Price, $1.50.

"Out of the Silences" reminded the reviewer very much of that old book entitled "The Silent Places," by Stewart White. The new one, however, has overcome to a considerable degree the dreariness of the white plains of the old by adding a very human touch to the story.

Through glooms of night and winter even when the bleak snow covered mountains are described, the story is built around an American boy, "Bob" Collamore, who is brought up in intimate touch with the Cree Indian tribes, and with that start in life goes out into the world and becomes an expert in the pulp field.

OTHER POEMS.

By Owen E. McGillicuddy, with an introduction by Joseph T. Clark, of the Editorial Staff of the Toronto Daily Star. Frederick D. Goodchild, publisher, Toronto. 48 pages. The predominating feature of this dainty little sheaf of verse is the genuine poetic spirit with which the author is endowed.

WAR TIME RECIPES.

By Mary Elizabeth McClelland, Goodchild & Stewart, Ltd., Toronto, publishers. 164 pages. Price, $1.25. The answer comes across literature of almost every conceivable kind, on matters ranging from aeroplanes to recipes. This book is one of the latter, but from the point of its being practical it is in a class by itself.

THE CHRONICLE OF KAN-UK THE KUTE.

By Frank Burne Black. 102 pages. Price, $1.00. G. P. Putnam's & Sons, New York, publishers. This is indeed a book that is something different from the usual. Were it written in ordinary style, it would probably not attract attention, but it has been penned in a quaint biblical style that makes it at once one of the most amusing satirical works published in recent times.

cial language of the Hun's preparations for the war, and of the actual incidents of the war. The most interesting part of the story, however, is the war in which Kan-uk the Kute tells of the German propaganda work in Canada and the United States, and then later of the work done in this country in the making of shells and in greater production.

By Lieut. Stanley Rutledge, in his book, "Pen Pictures From the Trenches." "Away over the hills the guns are roaring. Sometimes it happens that one or two batteries only will be firing, but it becomes contagious.
