APPEAL TO THE CITIZENS

TO SUBSCRIBE TO THE VICTORY CHRISTMAS TREE FUND.

W. F. Nickle and H. C. Nickle Offer To Make Up the Deficit if Their Fellow-Citizens Do Not Subscribe.

The following letter to Santa Claus was received by the Whig on Monday morning, and is published in the hope that the citizens will find in it a spur towards action:

Dear Santa Claus:—The editor of the 'Whig is right when he says the kiddies must not cry this Christmas because Santa Claus forgot them while Daddy was overseas, but, judging from the money subscribed to the Victory Christmas Tree fund for Soldiers' Kiddies, it would appear that some little ones must be neglected if there is not promptly more money to use than is now ready for you.

Without doubt it takes care and time for you to get the presents made and bought after the money to pay for them reaches you and, that no time may be lost, not a soldier's boy or girl, big or little, be overlooked through daddy's having been fighting the Germans for us, you ought to know that we will see to it that enough is added to what thankful friends of the Soldiers' kiddies have given, and will continue to give to make the $1000, which is the sum you need to meet the cost of the Christmas trees and treat.

Get the Christmas trees, the toys, the ice cream, cake and candy, and be sure there is something for each child and enough for all. None must be forgotten, not one!

(Signed) W. F. Nickle; H. C. Nickle While these two gentlemen have signified their willingness to see to it that Santa Claus has enough money for his purpose, the Whig would like to point out that inasmuch as this paper inaugurated the fund a few years ago, it feels in honor bound to see it through to a successful conclusion. If, therefore, the amount aimed at is not secured, the Whig will gladly contribute the balance itself. It stood ready to do so last year, but the fund was large enough then to meet all expenditures and leave a nice nest egg over for this year. Sufficient donations are being sought to meet all demands again this season.
