"THE WIFE"

MRS. CURTISS EXPOUNDS HER VIEWS

CHAPTER CXXIV.
Ruth was gone for two or three days. She had an interesting bit of work to do; and when she returned it was easily to be seen it had done her good. A few days after her return another letter came from Brian. In it he made no mention of Mollie; but spoke of expecting soon to be ordered to the front. He also told in a few simple words that he was now a lieutenant. He said nothing of what had led to his promotion, however, which was like him—Ruth thought.
Someway, this letter made her even more uneasy than had the other, but for a widely different reason. She felt guilty toward him in that she had allowed her feelings to restrain her confession concerning the baby. She wished she had sent the letter she had destroyed. The matter was so uncertain, so slow. What if something should happen to him and he never know he had a little son? She would feel guilty all her life.

So once more she wrote of her boy, and this time she hurried out and posted it. She would give herself no time to change her mind, or to let thoughts of Mollie King prevent her doing her duty.
"I have written Brian about baby," she said to her aunt.
"I am glad, dear. Your friends would be shocked did they know you had not."
"Even though she didn't like Brian, and really would have aided Ruth to divorce him, she felt that it was wrong to hide the knowledge that he had a son from him; that Ruth was also wronging herself by doing so, Brian would have a deal case of complaint against her."
Mrs. Curtiss had called one evening and had quoted at length from a letter she had received from Mollie King. Ruth was so glad she had acknowledged that she knew Mollie and Brian saw each other. Thankful that she had not evaded the issue when Mrs. Curtiss spoke of Mollie.

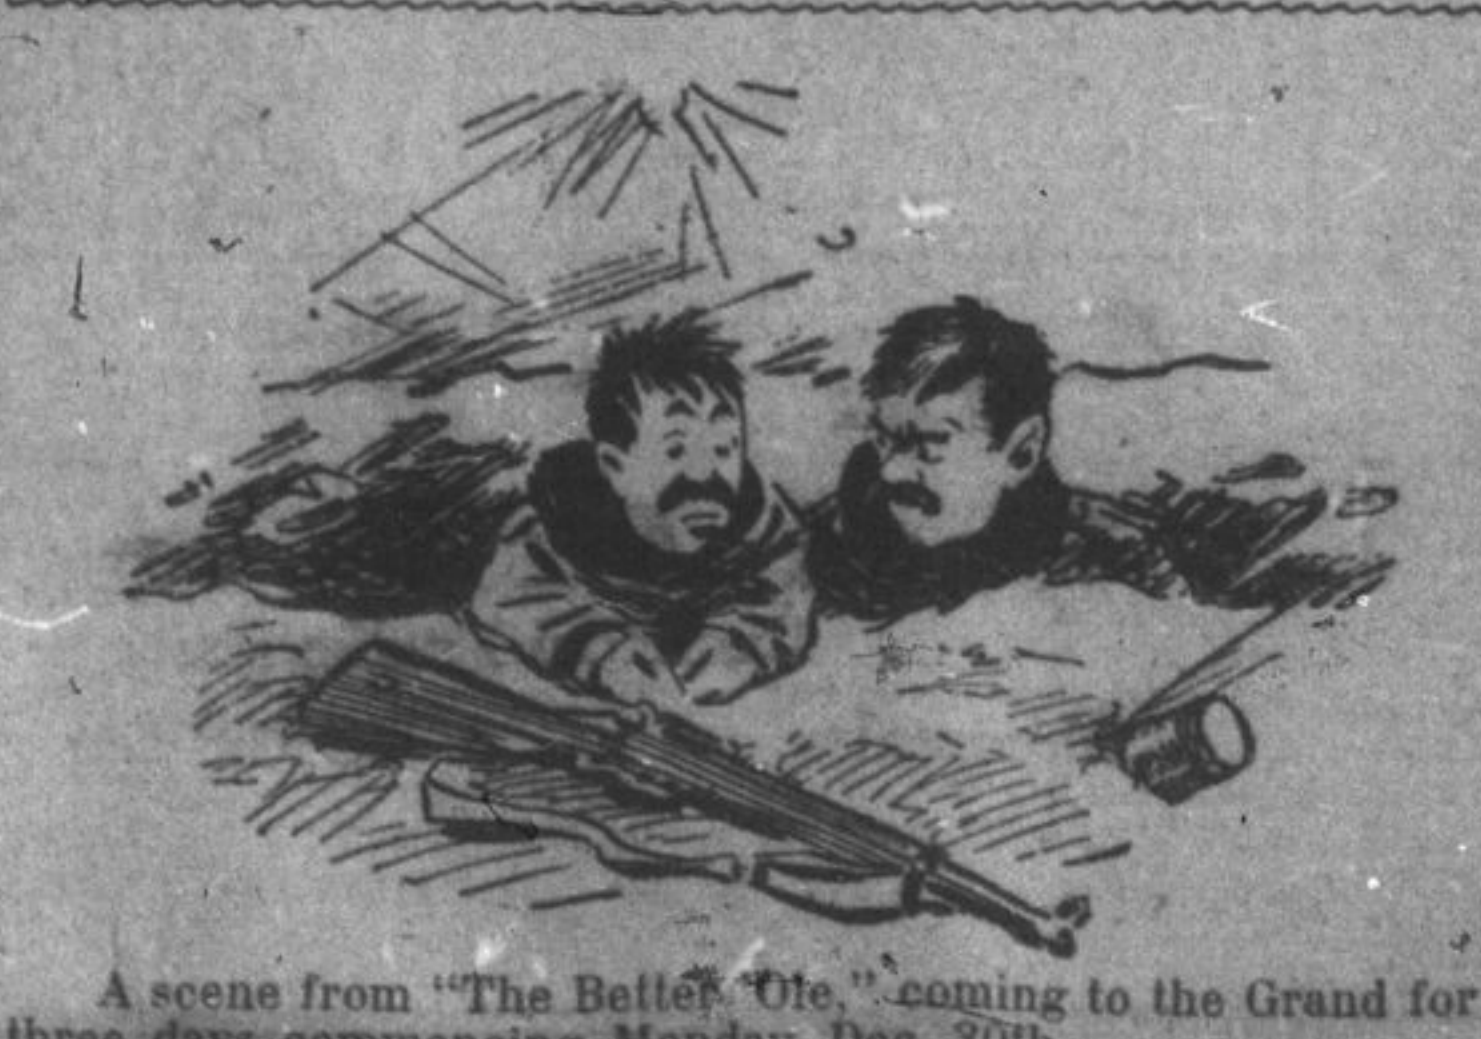

"It is a good thing you aren't jealous, Ruth. I should be, if it were my husband and I knew how intimate they had been before Brian married. I am such a goose where Mr. Curtiss is concerned. I honestly think it would kill me if he gave me any reason to be jealous."
"I am not of a jealous disposition," Ruth returned calmly. She had deceived even her aunt as to the feeling she had about Mollie King.
"Be thankful that you are not. It is an awful feeling. And a woman is so helpless. A man has so many opportunities to deceive. He is away all day; his time—if he is in his house for himself—is his own. How in the world is a woman to know he isn't spending it with some other woman, if she doesn't feel sure he knows no other intimately? I have always said that I never would give Mr. Curtiss a chance. You see, your being in business has given

Impression and Convictions

Yesterday Jamie and I went to the art gallery. Jamie is ten, and is already taking an interest in the developing of his muscles; the main object of our trip was to allow him to gaze curiously on the big muscles of Hercules, and Atlas, and Mercury with his winged feet.
Later we looked at the pictures—Jamie has a common turn of mind. He looked over the pictures with a critical eye and then asked, "Are they for sale?"
"Some are and some are not."
"About how much would they want for one of them," he asked, tilting his head appraisingly on one side.
"Oh, the prices differ—some would cost around a hundred dollars and some many thousands."
"What?" was his only answer to this. Then after a little thought, "I guess it's pretty hard to paint pictures like this—requires pretty skilled hands and—all that," this

AN UNTRIMMED HAT

Pinafore Sailor Is Made in Felt and Black Velvet.
Rolls Up From Head—Has Low Crown That Does Not Interfere With Lines of Brim.
There is a strong tendency in France to simplify street hats to the point of bare severity, and there is a strong effort here to trim all hats with a choice of buckles, ribbon, flowers, plumes, cords or embroidery.
The sailor, with its straight brim, has given place to a pinafore sailor that was launched here early last spring. It is now made in felt and black velvet and is sponsored by the good milliners. It rolls up from the head and has a low, crushed crown that does not interfere in any way with the lines of the brim. This hat is untrimmed, except for a crown-band of the satin ribbon and a flat bow at the side, or rather, this is the style in which it is advocated for street wear and worn by well-dressed women; but certain milliners provide its crown with a large wreath of colored roses or ragged chrysanthemums, and the effect is quite good. It is then appropriate for an afternoon hat. If a woman likes the shape, she can indulge in both kinds and choose separate colors.
By the way, duplication is a strong point in the modern selection of clothes. The woman who thinks she must have every gown in her wardrobe different from the other, would be aghast at the knowledge that certain fashionable women are leading the way to having five gowns made for an entire season exactly alike, and five hats to go with them, exactly alike.
The dressmakers have become accustomed to this innovation during the last six months and they are now quite used to it in the preparation of an autumn wardrobe. A woman comes in, selects an entire costume with care and attention to every detail, then orders as many as she needs for the season.

APPRECIATES WORK DONE

By Kingston Women During the Epidemic in October.
Mrs. G. Hunter Ogilvie, vice-president of the Ontario branch of the Women's Aid Department of the St. John's Ambulance Brigade, had received a copy of the following letter from Major-General J. T. Fotheringham, acting director of medical services for Canada, to the assistant commissioner of the organization.
"In view of the progress which is being made in the organization of the Women's Aid Department, it is desired to place on record the appreciation of the director-general of medical services and of the Honourable the Minister of Militia of the ladies who have been serving as members of the nursing divisions of the St. John's Ambulance Brigade overseas, and within the Dominion of Canada as volunteer hospital probationers in military hospitals in Canada.
From every quarter there has come the same very favorable expression of opinion with regard to the value of their services. It is earnestly hoped that all of them may be able to accept this new situation created by the formation of the Women's Aid Department. It is requested that you be good enough if you concur, to transmit to them officially in your orders an acknowledgment of the very fine services which they have thus rendered to the sick and wounded soldiers of the Canadian Expeditionary Force and of the assistance which they have given to the Canadian Army Medical Services. (Signed) J. T. Fotheringham."

Returning to Belgium.

Mademoiselle Suzanne Silvercrus, who made a great impression when she lectured in Kingston on behalf of the Belgian relief fund about a month ago, has called from New York to return to her native country. Miss Silvercrus, who spent three years on this continent lecturing in various towns and cities, in leaving said that she had a splendid opinion of America and Canada, and her last message was one of gratitude to the people of these countries for the help they have sent to Belgium. She is returning to Belgium to engage in work there during the reconstruction period, in urging co-operation for the suffering people of her country. While on this continent she has raised hundreds of thousands of dollars for the Belgian children, and has made thousands of friends for herself all over the country, including a large number in Kingston.

The Arenas of Toronto has secured the services of Lieut. McCulloch, M.C., R.A.F., as goalkeeper to replace Harry Holmes, who has been ordered to report to the Coast League.

LOOK AT CHILD'S TONGUE IF SICK CROSS, FEVERISH

When constipated or bilious give "California Syrup of Figs."
Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, it is a sure sign that your little one's stomach, liver and bowels need a gentle, thorough cleansing at once.
When peevish, cross, listless, pale, doesn't sleep, doesn't eat or act naturally, or is feverish, stomach sour, breath bad; has stomach ache, sore throat, diarrhoea, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of its little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.
You needn't coax sick children to take this harmless "fruit laxative"; they love its delicious taste, and it always makes them feel splendid.
Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. Unadulterated

Ivory Soap contains no adulterants. The materials from which it is made are as pure and as high grade as can be. They are efficient in themselves; uncombined alkali and other harsh materials could not make them more so. Ivory Soap can be safely used to wash anything that pure, clear water alone will not harm.

IT FLOATS
The all-white toilette possesses undeniable distinction. Chiffon evening gowns are absolutely without trimming. Wide tucks are seen on the skirts of the Paris dresses. Gaudy frocks are belted with narrow strips of suede. Flowered cretonnes make attractive odd waistcoats and smocks. Shoes and hats should harmonize if a costume is to be successful. One-piece dresses show plain flat backs with the fronts trimmed. White lawn and lingerie collars are very charming on linen frocks. Dresses of heavy voile, printed foulard are trimmed with beads. Velours, in spite of their scarcity, are the most desired coat fabrics.
