THE FOLLOW THROUGH AS KNOWN TO GOLF

Is Also Practised by the Baseball Players and the Billiard Experts.

The injunction to "follow through," which golf professionals lay more stress on than any of the other cities is not peculiar to golf alone. In baseball the most successful hitters and batsmen are those who follow through; billiard and pocket billiard teachers always emphasize to their pupils that observance of this principle is the fundamental requirement of success and the good bowler invariably "follows through."

To the student of athletic sports, therefore, particularly those involving the use of a ball, the two words constitute the ten commandments, for they are the foundation upon which practically all success in these sports is built.

Take, for instance, such a batsman and pitcher as Ty Cobb and Walter Johnson, respectively. When Cobb bats he "steps into" the ball. He throws every ounce of his strength directly into the sphere. He bats left-handed and stands with his feet together until the start of his swing. When he starts his left foot goes forward and at the end that foot is to the right of a line drawn from the spot known as the home plate. That shows the extent to which the Georgia Peach steps into the ball or, in other words, reveals how he follows through.

The same principle applies to John's pitching. What that long right arm of his he takes a full, complete swing. His hand goes back and forward as far as he can reach. If his swing were extended so as to make a complete circle that circle would be greater in diameter by perhaps three or four inches than a similar circle made by any other pitcher's swing. And it is that long, smooth swing with its perfect follow through that makes Johnson the great pitcher that he is.

Willie Hoppe, champion of them all in billiards, is the best exponent of the follow through. When a cue comes in contact with the ball the main object of the player is to drive the sphere in a certain precise direction. This is not his only object, of course, since his secondary intention is to drive the ball a certain distance; but direction is his main thought. And the "great billiard player" gets that exact direction by following through with their cues. In fact, it may be said that the distance the bill will travel is determined at the instant of contact between cue and ball, and that the direction it is to take is not determined until the instant the cue leaves the ball at the end of the stroke.

When the cue does not follow through the stroke is necessarily jerky and uncertain, exactly as the baseball batsman's swing is when he steps away from the ball, or as the golfer's swing is uncertain when he does not follow through. Golfers know, more than all others, and more to their infinite sorrow, the disastrous penalties of failure to obey this law.

The Chicago Daily News remarks that when the New York Giants gave five ball players and a cash consideration for catcher Earl Smith of the Rochester team the five players didn't amount to much or else Mr. Smith is no ordinary ball player.

Four Service Stars

Hanging in the window of the Roosevelt mansion on Sagamore Hill at Oyster Bay, L.I., is an American service flag bearing four stars, one of them, alas, of gold, denoting the death in action of Flight Lieut. Theodore Roosevelt, Jr. The late "Teddy" Roosevelt, Sr., had four sons. He and Mrs. Roosevelt gave their all to the cause which the former president espoused so strongly. These boys all received thorough athletic training at the instigation of their famous father. Mr. Roosevelt, even in his declining years continued to engage in sports, although of less strenuous varieties than when he was more robust. The fact is not generally known that the dead statesman lost the sight of his left eye while boxing with his sparring partner toward the end of his tenure of office at the White House.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Will Open Season on April 23rd in Four U. S. Cities.

The National League will formally open its season on April 23rd, in the cities of Boston, Philadelphia, Cincinnati and Chicago, but will precede this formal opening with games, morning and afternoon, on Patriot's Day, April 19th, at Boston. This announcement was made by President John Heydler of the National League, following the completion of the schedule by the joint American and National League committees.

Boxing in New Jersey

Those who are responsible for the legalization of boxing in New Jersey are not to be caught holding the bag. With prospects good for the establishment of the sport in New York, Illinois, Iowa, Nebraska, California, and other States, the State's glomans do not propose to be found napping. They are already casting about them for ways and means of building the game in their territory upon a more substantial and attractive foundation than is given it by the provisions of the present Hurley law. At the meeting of the New Jersey Legislature it is more than probable that a twelve-round boxing bill will be sought to displace the present eight-round measure. To offset the competition of other States, New Jersey will have to amend the Hurley law and make it more attractive.

Barry, Wounded, Defends Title

Ernest Barry, the world's professional sculling champion, will defend his title next summer against Dick Paddon, the Australian sculler. Barry is still suffering from the effects of wounds received in France. The champion is quite willing to give Paddon another chance at the crown, as he regards him as a fine sculler and sportsman. Barry won the championship several years ago, when he beat Dick Armat, the New Zealand challenger.
