Surely Liberalism in Canada can not endorse Sir Wilfrid Laurier's sentiments in regard to the Sinn Fein platform. It is willing to concede Ireland the same measure of self-government that Canada enjoys, but it cannot support any measure of separation. Once more; Sir Wilfrid is out of harmony with the spirit of true Liberalism.

complex as they are, there should be a helpful angle from which women may study present conditions, so that they may make a fitting contribution to the reconstruction 'o Canadian life. Labor can never be disassociated from the human fac tor. To deal with labor means dealing with human beings. On the other hand, capital is a source of potential action from which energy must be drawn to maintain the occupations which support the homes of the country. Capital is something to be used, and it is indispensable. To bring about, a better understanding of the great responsibilities in the aspirations of labor, and of the use and characteristics of capital, is one of the main efforts of reconstruction;

DEMPSEY

Now that the long drawn war is done, and peace abides in camps and courts, we turn a moment from the Hun to think and talk of helpful sports. No armies now distort the maps, at the behest of czar or king, but we'll still have out little scraps, our little triumphs in the ring. While captains whooped and chargers reared, and soldiers fired the deadly gun, a new phenomenon appeared, who packs home bacon by the ton. This Dempsey, of heroic name, that by another Jack was worn, has quickly gained a healthy fame, and made a lot of cheeses mourn. Fred Fulton, who was won't to wist that he would wear the champeen's crown, ran up against this Dempsey's fist, then on the mourners' bench sat down. One moment he was full of hope, the next in anguish dire he sat, and leaned against the sagging rope, and asked the crowd where he was at. Carl Morris gried, "Alas for Fred, that one so beautiful should fall! I'll punch this Dempsey party's head, and stop his fooling, once for all." But Dempsey smote that mass of beef, and found the vital place he sought, and Carl sat down to nurse his grief, and readjust his dome of thought. Tlike this man of swats and biffs, this Dempsey, vigorous and strong; he's weeding medical men resented the action of The problems of labor and capital out the noisy stiffs and showing them they don't belong.
