THEATRICAL.

At The Grand
Another enthusiastic audience witnessed the feature picture at the Grand yesterday afternoon, beautiful Catherine Calvert made a decided hit in her latest six reel production, "Out of the Night." This was a high class photoplay and Miss Calvert's winsome beauty and brilliant artistry was seen to the best possible advantage. Supporting the popular star was a splendid cast of well-known artists and all the parts were played in an effective, convincing manner. "Out of the Night" was a high geared dramatic story, into which was interwoven scenes rich in human interest while retaining the deep pathos and absorbing romance of the original story. There was also on the Bill, the Pathe News, a Judge Brown story, a Lonesome Luke comedy and other reels. The vaudeville consisted of the South American Birds, in a novelty roping and bird act that was exceptionally fine. Don't forget that this programme will be given its last showing this evening.

"The Wanderer."
The great Biblical drama "The Wanderer," which comes to the Grand Opera House for an engagement of three nights, with matinee on Saturday, commencing Thursday evening, Jan. 16th. There is a scene which might well apply to the youth of today, although it is supposed to have occurred in the Holyland over three thousand years ago, in the time of King Solomon. This scene shows the mother, Hulda, (played by that great artist Florence Auer), giving advice to her headstrong son, Jethor (played by Frederick Low), as he is about to leave the protecting influence of the home for the big city of Jerusalem. The boy protests that he wishes to go to the city to seek fame and fortune, and that he will be able to take care of himself; but the mother lays her hand on his arm tenderly and says: "What dost thou know of the City, my son? Things are not as our dreams tells us. To such as thee, the city yielded but little, and from such, much doth she take away. They who would conquer there must fix their gaze upon harder roads than thou dost choose. Thy lips are soft rounded—would they were stronger. Thy hair is soft and curly—would it were rough and armer. For I fear Jethor, when I think of thee in the great city, and most of all Jethor, I fear the women of the city. How unerring was the mother's instinct in warning Jethor of the women of the city of Jerusalem is proven in the second act of "The Wanderer," where the boy falls under the spell of a vampire of old Jerusalem, who succeeds in getting from him every shewel that his father gave him upon his departure from home.

At Griffin's.
Wonderful Charles Ray again demonstrated his popularity when an enthusiastic audience witnessed his latest success, "A Nine O'clock Town." In this photoplay this versatile star has one of the finest pictures of his repertoire to date, and this is saying a great deal. The story is an excellent one in every respect, and affords Mr. Ray excellent opportunity for the display of those talents which have placed him in the foremost rank of American cinema stars. Pauline Fredericks in "A Daughter of the South" shared the honors with the above feature, and was also claimed to be of superior merit in entertainment value. This programme will be shown for the last time to-night.

At the Strand.
Emmy Wehlen, in "His Bonded Wife," a smart, up-to-date comedy drama of society life, was a delightful attraction at the Strand. See her to-night. In this picture Miss Wehlen is supported by a cast of well-known and distinguished players, headed by Creighton Hale in the leading role. The story is that of a beautiful young society debutante who wishes to be sure that the man she marries is in love with her for her own beautiful self and not for her wealth. With this idea in view she leaves her luxurious home and lives the quiet, simple life of a girl in ordinary circumstances. Here she meets and falls in love with a young architect, who is also in love with her. She still poses as a poor girl, however, and the unusual complications which arise impart many humorous situations—as well as many semi-tragic ones—to the clever play.

IS NOT QUALIFIED.
Lieut. A. G. Sandford Not Eligible For the Board.
An interesting point has arisen out of the appointment of Lieut. A. G. Sandford as the city's representative on the Board of Education. According to law, the member must be a British subject and a ratepayer of the municipality in which he is appointed. Lieut. Sandford not being a householder nor a ratepayer, is therefore not eligible. He is not a voter in the city. It is regrettable that this appointment should have been made without steps having been taken to find out Mr. Sandford's position in the matter. As his appointment is of necessity illegal, the city will lose the services of an energetic man.

Lauder Almost Missed Train.
Harry Lauder narrowly missed his train after the show and reception on Tuesday night. Mayor Newman volunteered to drive him to the G. T. R. station, and they reached the inner depot just as the train had left. The mayor then started for the junction with his car, but near Davis' tannery he ran into a snowbank and stuck fast. After futile attempts to free the car, the party had to get out and walk the rest of the way, reaching the station just in time to catch the train for the west.
