Vice-President and General Manager of G.T.P. Tells of Development in West.

Montreal, Jan. 20.—"Conditions in the West continue to be very satisfactory in spite of the readjustments which must be faced following upon the close of the war."

"We are looking forward with every confidence," continued Mr. Hinton, "to receiving during the present year a large number of settlers from the United States to take up the splendid lands which are still available at moderate prices. The war affected most seriously the class of men—that is the young farmer class—from which we have in the past drawn most of our immigrants."

where there is a heavy demand for cattle feeds, etc. There has been a large increase in the number of cattle in Western Canada an indication of the growth of mixed farming. The Western farmer follows in that respect the only plan which is open to him. He engages in grain growing until such time as he commands sufficient capital to acquire stock. He realizes just as shrewdly as any one else that it is to mix farming that he can look for the best results in the long run.

WESTERN CANADA CONDITIONS GOOD

Vice-President and General Manager of G.T.P. Tells of Development in West.

Montreal, Jan. 20.—"Conditions in the West continue to be very satisfactory in spite of the readjustments which must be faced following upon the close of the war."

"We are looking forward with every confidence," continued Mr. Hinton, "to receiving during the present year a large number of settlers from the United States to take up the splendid lands which are still available at moderate prices. The war affected most seriously the class of men—that is the young farmer class—from which we have in the past drawn most of our immigrants."

But little doubt that we will again have an opportunity of welcoming a considerable number of these desirable men from the United States. The territory served by the Grand Trunk Pacific will also receive, of course, its share, and a very large one we anticipate, of these of our own returned men desirous of taking up agricultural opportunities with the addition of many new-comers from the United Kingdom.

"There is steady development proceeding along the whole line of the Grand Trunk Pacific and with the return to normal conditions that development will be accelerated, particularly in regard to the exploitation of the great natural resources in British Columbia, which include lumber and minerals requiring capital for their proper development. At Prince Rupert there is general prosperity. Plans are just being completed by the Prince Rupert Dry Dock and Engineering Company for the building of ways for the inauguration of the shipbuilding program. This will include the construction of wooden and steel ships sufficient to keep this port busy for about five years. This port is well situated for shipbuilding purposes, making it possible for it to receive materials without any additional cost as compared with other points of the Pacific Coast.

It was also at its doors a wonderful supply of Northern spruce, and there is no better material for shipbuilding than this class of timber."

"The volume of traffic moving on the Grand Trunk Pacific is satisfactory, being particularly heavy from northern points, such as the Prince Albert branch, down to points in Southern Saskatchewan and Alberta
