THEATRICAL.

At The Grand.
To-night will be the last chance for the film fans in Kingston to visit this popular playhouse and see the five reel Universal feature, "After the War," starring beautiful and versatile Grace Cunard, that has been causing so much attention during the last three days. "After the War" is a war picture but there is no war shown during the unrolling of the story, as the events are all supposed to happen just after the hostilities have ceased. Miss Cunard has a role in this production that gives her plenty of opportunity to display her superb talent and this film is proclaimed as her best work in every way. There were also other films to complete this splendid attraction, such as the Pathe News, an O. Henry story and a very funny comedy that along with Saider's trained goats, who presented an exceedingly clever act, rounded out a programme that none should miss this evening.

At Griffin's.
A highly delighted audience viewed the charming programme presented at this theatre last evening, and expressed their appreciation in no uncertain manner, especially when pleasant Billie Burke appeared in her new photo play "The Make-Believe Wife," which contained an abundance of fine comedy. The story of the comedy is one of exceptional interest and the characterization of the star is one long to be remembered. Of equal merit is the splendid photoplay "Ace High," which stars, in the lead, the star, an excellent role, and caused much comment to be heard amongst the audience. For thrills and excitement this photoplay cannot be beaten, and taken on the whole the programme shown is without a doubt one of the best shown at this theatre in many a day.

At the Strand.
The story of "The Children in the House," featuring Norma Talmadge, to be shown at the Strand Theatre, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, covers a varied action with thrills, laughter, tears and poetic fancy much interwoven. Arthur Vincent, a real estate dealer, neglects his wife and two children while in the toils of Jane Courtney, an empty-headed cabaret dancer. Cora, the wife, frequently visits her sister Alice, who lives next door. Alice is the wife of Fred Brown, a detective, and has three children. With the family lives Fred's bachelor brother, Charles, who is a former lover of Cora, and cannot bear to see her neglected by her husband. It is during one of Cora's visits to the house, when Charles goes off and sits by the fire alone to try and still his heart-ache, that the children of the house and her children come to beg him for a "good-night" story. While he is deliberating one of the children asks him why he has no wife and children of his own, and in this he finds his inspiration. Unknown to him, Cora is listening behind the curtain. He told his story of love and its death in a thrilling way.

Later, Cora and Charles are thrown together, and she admits that her heart has been made a cold stone, too. And the old love blazes up fiercely in both hearts. In the meantime Arthur is in danger of losing his cabaret girl because his money is giving out. So he plans to rob the bank. His plan is ingenious, and when the bank is robbed, suspicion is cast upon Charles, the cashier. Charles is unable to declare his alibi, that he was with Cora, for fear of bringing scandal upon her and her children. But the children at play have found the hiding-place of the real thieves. And the police fight that follows, brings happiness to Charles, to Cora and to the children in the house.

THE HOLD-UP MEN ARE STILL AT LARGE

No New Developments in Sensational Robbery at Cataract.

There are no further developments in the sensational "hold-up," which took place at Cataract, on Thursday night, when two masked men entered the store of William J. O'Shea, and at the point of a revolver, robbed him of $30.

"I have not had any more telephone calls from either of the two men," said Mr. O'Shea, when questioned by the Whig on Saturday morning.

Some people had an idea that a couple of young fellows pulled off the "act" as a joke on the well-known storekeeper, but if that was the case, the would-be jokers took great chances in doing what they did, as had Mr. O'Shea had a gun in his possession, there would, no doubt, have been a different story to tell. It was a case of two men against one with the two intruders armed, so this left Mr. O'Shea in a helpless condition.

LONG TRIP AFTER A YOUTH

Who is Accused of Stealing a Horse in the West.

An officer arrived in the city on Saturday morning from Saskatchewan to take in charge the youth named Johnson, who is wanted in the west to answer to a charge of horse stealing.

Johnson was taken in charge by Sgt. James Bateson, and Constable John Naylor, following the receipt of a photograph and a description of Johnson, and was held at the police station pending the arrival of the officer from the west, who left on his return journey Saturday noon. He started out on Tuesday morning on his trip to Kingston and arrived at 8 o'clock Saturday morning via the C.P.R.

Military Matters

Sergt. Chapman, of the pay staff, has been promoted to the rank of lieutenant, and a number of the clerical staff at headquarters have lately been awarded a crown, among them being Sergt. R. J. Donaldson.

Major C. S. Wilkie, Reserve of Officers, has been struck off the attached strength of the Royal School of Artillery.

The band of the R. C. H. A. played in the barrack square on Friday forenoon. This is most unusual for this time of the year. Old soldiers at the barracks cannot recall ever having seen the band play out of doors on the last day of January within the last twenty years.

The battery commander inspected "C" Battery, R.C.H.A., at noon on Saturday, and was greatly pleased with their smart appearance.

Lieut.-Col. J. W. Odell, O. C. of the late 73rd Battery, has been appointed by the Counties Council of Northumberland and Durham, Public School Inspector of Division No. 2 of these counties.

MAYOR H. W. NEWMAN who addresses the County Council on Thursday on behalf of the Kingston General Hospital.

How Stephen Mepstead Died.
Mrs. Stephen Mepstead, formerly of 34 Johnson street, whose husband was killed in France during the last days of the war, has received a letter from his platoon commander telling of the circumstances of his death. The late soldier was killed by a machine gun bullet through the heart, and died instantly. He had been promoted to non-commissioned rank shortly before his death. The remains were buried near the village of Aulnoy, not far from Valenciennes. His officer speaks very highly of his soldierly qualities, and extends to the relatives the deepest sympathy of all his comrades.

The Silent Mystery.
Francis Ford, the serial king, will appear in his newest and greatest serial, "The Silent Mystery," crammed with action, novelties, and suspense. The swiftest story, the most amazing mystery, the snappiest, liveliest, purchased serial ever offered. Also Wm. S. Hart in "The Marked Deck," and something new in a scenic production, "What Was The 13th Labor of Hercules," at the King Edward, Monday and Tuesday. This is actually the beginning of "The Silent Mystery." Usual admission.
