SEARCH NO MAN'S LAND FOR MISSING FRENCH

Army of 12,000 Will Undertake a Thorough Exploration of Territory-

Paris, March 8 .- On the casualty lists of the French army the word "missing" is written in opposite the names of 314,000 men, Investigations A NUMber which have been conducted have resulted in establishing the fact that of this number all hope for approximately 120,000 must be abandoned.

In these times of intensive warfare it is, of course, possible for a man to be literally "blown to atoms," but a minute examination of No Man's Land, it is hoped, may still yield indications by which it is possible to trace the fate of at least some of the missing men.

An army of 12,000 searchers will subject all the trenches and dugouts along the whole battle line to a most careful scrutiny for any evidence that may lead to identification. That this is no light task is evident. Nearly be explored. In all cases approaching definite certificate will be issued to the families of the fallen.

There is talk of cemeteries being an everlasting monument to the dead of the great war.
