LISTED DEAD; COMES HOME

CORNWALL SOLDIER REPORTED MISSING AND THEN KILLED.

Pte. William Lalonde Is the Man—One of His Companions Was Pte. McKame of Kingston.

To have one of their soldier sons reported missing on May 28th, 1917, and officially reported killed in action on June 28th of the same year, and then have him walk in on them a day or two ago to pay them a visit, is the pleasant experience of Mr. and Mrs. John Lalonde, who reside on Marlborough street in Cornwall, Pte. William Lalonde, once a prominent junior and intermediate lacrosse player, in his home town, who was locally known as "Shamrock" Lalonde, is the young man in question. He enlisted with the 23rd Battalion in Montreal, on December 4, 1914, and went overseas in February, 1915. After a year and five months on active service he was taken prisoner in May, 1917, on the right of Vimy Trench, and was then reported as missing, and a month later was officially reported killed in action.

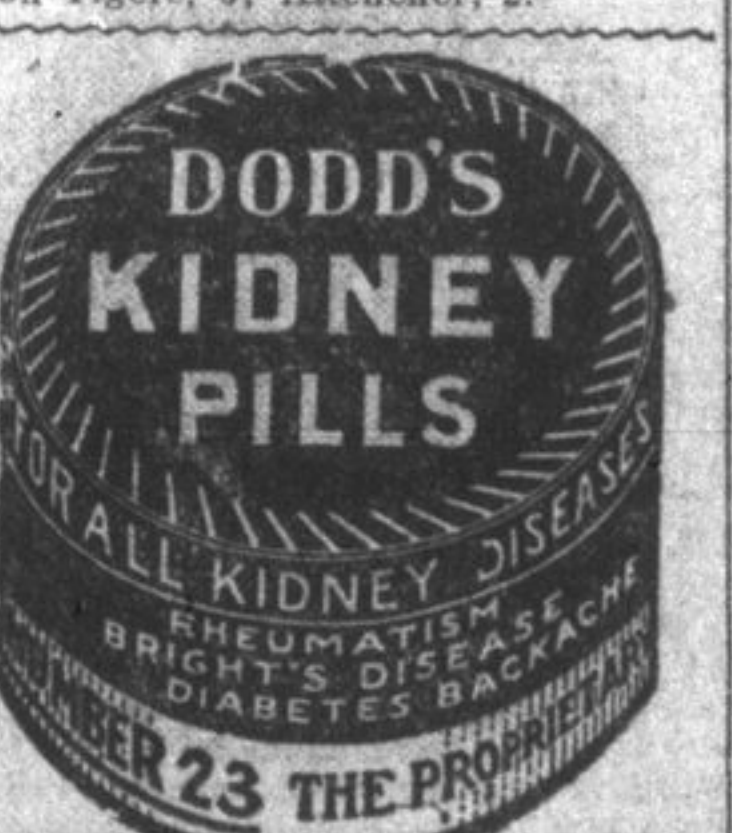

Lalonde and two other Canadians, one of whom he remembers as McKame of Kingston, were placed in the prison camp at Douai, after which Lalonde was sent to Altidam, Germany, his identification card bearing the number 357711. From Altidam he was sent to work on a farm in the town of Gohren, on the island of Rugen, where he was employed by a farmer named A. M. Schwartz. Pte. Lalonde was paid one mark a day and says the farmer used him well, only he was housed in a brick barn, with horses on one side of his "room" and ows on the other and this was the most unpleasant part of his experience at Rugen.

The first five months of his imprisonment were spent at Douai Camp, where the prisoners were given three meals a day, but oh, such meals! They consisted mainly of soups, which sometimes contained barley and other times cabbage leaves. The prisoners were unable to do their work assigned them, and when their weak bodies refused to respond to the call made on them, their guards goaded them on to the last effort and they were knocked about with the butt end of a rifle.

After eighteen months in the German prison camps he left Rugen and was sent back to Altidam and from there to Stettin. He left the latter place on December 11th, 1918, on the S.S. Frederick VIII for Copenhagen, and arrived in Hull, England, on December 14th, and reached Ripon Camp the same day. He arrived in Canada last week. Pte. Lalonde and a party of Canadians were almost buried in a pile of debris when the Germans made a second onslaught on the Basilica in the wrecked town of Albert, on the Somme. The Canadians were hunting for souvenirs in the ruins of the Basilica, when a German shell came over and tore great holes in the portions of the edifice not previously wrecked. The boys had a narrow escape from death but continued their search. The Cornwall man was stripped of his souvenirs when he was taken prisoner.

Pte. Lalonde has a brother in the service, Pte. Joseph Lalonde, who was in Belgium when he wrote home last. He went overseas with the 253rd (Queen's) Highlanders.
