BARBARA ASKS NEIL FOR THE SAME CONFIDENCE HE GIVES BLANCHE

CHAPTER XXXIII.

That night Neil came home in rare good humor. I noticed at once that he had been drinking—not much, but enough to make him a bit more talkative than he otherwise would have been. My heart sank, as it always did when he drank. I was so afraid it might grow upon him. It seemed to me he came home more and more often with the smell of it clinging to him.

"How did Blanche Orton happen to be with you and Mr. Scott this noon?" The question was as casual as I could make it.

"Obviously, my question jarred. 'She wanted to talk to him,' he said coldly.

I wanted Neil's confidence so truly that these half-no, not even half-confidences, hurt me cruelly.

"I am wondering what about. Surely she can have nothing in common with that man?"

"Like a woman—want to know everything."

I drew in a sharp little breath. His words, his tone, stabbed me. In spite of my burning curiosity, I said:

"I'm a wife, Neil, as well as a woman," I spoke with all the dignity I could command. Curious as I was, I would not let him think it was simply jealous, vulgar curiosity that had prompted my questions. And it was not. I felt that it was my right as his wife to know these things about which he was so secretive.

Now—alike I had firmly decided in my mind only a few hours before that all the innuendos, all the hints I had heard, all that Mr. Frederick had told me, were emanations of minds incapable of doing what Neil could do, and untrue—now my doubts returned in full force. Doubts of both kinds—of his business, and of his relation with Blanche Orton.

I stole an annoyed glance at Neil. Presently he lurched forward a bit in his chair, then straightened himself with an obvious effort to disguise from me what I already knew: that he had been drinking.

"Don't look at me like that, Bab! what's got into you to-night?"

"Nothing, Neil. But something has gone into you. Please, dear, don't drink. I am afraid. Afraid for you and—for me."

"Nonsense! I only take a couple after I am thru at the office. It braces me up. I shan't 'end in the gutter' like the story books say, so don't worry."

"Neil, won't you take me into your confidence?" I begged. "I don't like to feel that my sex, and my power to amuse you, and my home-making ability are the only links between us. It is an insult to my intelligence. Perhaps I might not understand things all at once; perhaps I could be of no help or assistance to you. But I should be so much happier Neil, if I felt you were making me your confidante, that you let me share all your life instead of only a part of it. Women are doing many things now-a-days, Neil. They are successful in business and in the professions. It shows that it is not brain power that has been our lack, or the reason we have not competed with men long ago. I have read of women who have been the inspiration of the men they married—who have given them ideas which made for success. How do you know but that I might be such a woman? You see, Neil, dear, you don't give me a chance."

Instead of answering immediately, he looked at me thru half-closed lids a moment. Then:

"You say you might give me ideas that would make for my success. Am I not successful enough to please your ladyship? What do you want that I do not provide? Don't you have as much, or more, than any of the young women who have been married scarcely four years, and whose husbands are but thirty years old? It seems to me that if you stop to think, you will not find it necessary to make the plea to help me, a cover for what is just plain curiosity. Once more I ask, Bab: what do you want that I do not provide?"

"The same confidence you give to Blanche Orton."

Pastor Has Resigned.

Rev. P. J. McInnis, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, Omamee, has resigned. Failing eyesight compels Mr. McInnis to give up active work for a time. Mr. McInnis spent some time as a chaplain overseas. He was at one time a resident of Harrowsmith, and contested Frontenac county in the Liberal interests.

Some Bird!

A bird which in some respects resembles a wild goose and in others looked like a wild duck was a few days ago shot on the premises of Matthew Ferguson at Barryvale. So far no one has been able to classify it, and it will be sent to a taxidermist at Kingston. Its weight is about five pounds, its color grey, and it has some of the head marks of a loon.

1½ yards 54-inch material. If contrasting material is used for the collar, ¾ yard 38 inches wide will be needed.

The proper way to begin making the coat is to close the under-arm and shoulder seams as notched, leaving the extensions free. Turn extensions under on slot perforations, lap to small "o" perforations and press. Adjust underfacing under-neck front with notches and corresponding edges even. Turn hem at lower edge of rear on small "o" perforations. Slash front of rear along line of small "o" perforations for pocket opening and blind the slashed edges.

Next, arrange the two pocket sections together and stitch around the edges forming a bag leaving the upper edge free, indicated by small "o" perforation. Sew pocket to opening in rear. Line pocket lap and sew upper edge (indicated by small "o" perforation) over the upper slashed edge.

Line sailor collar and sew to neck edge, notches and center-backs even. Close sleeve seams next, as notched easing any fullness between notches at elbow and leaving the extensions free; turn extension under on slot perforations, lap to small "o" perforations and finish for closing. Turn hem at lower edge on small "o" perforations. Sew sleeve in armhole as notched, with small "o" perforation at shoulder seam easing in any fullness between notches, or the fullness may be shrunk out. Hold the sleeve toward you when basting it in armhole.

TALKING IT OVER With Lorna Moon

"The Three Musketeers"

Here is a pretty kettle of fish! They are all coming home on the same transport! There's the boy who went to school with her. He went out as a private and won his lieutenantcy on the field; then there is the colonel who used to be fatherly in his attitude toward her; and there is the sergeant who didn't have time to win anything before he got his, and paid the toll of one good right leg to the demon war.

And they are all coming home to the little girl with quiet brown eyes—Oh, she isn't the least little bit of a coquette—at least, she is quite sure that she isn't. It began like this, you see: When a boy she has gone to school with goes to war, the least a nice girl can do is answer his letter.

HAD WEAK and FAINTING SPELLS.

Those feelings of faintness, those weak, "all gone" sinking sensations, which come over some people from time to time, are warnings that must not go unheeded.

They mean an extremely weakened condition of the heart and a disordered nervous system.

When the system is in this condition there is no time for delay. One fainting spell may be recovered from—will the next? One dizzy spell may pass off, but the next may be more serious.

Those who are wise will start taking Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, before their case becomes deep rooted and perhaps hopeless.

They will act directly on the disordered heart and weakened nervous system and restore them to full strength and vigor.

Miss Mary McCoy, Algoma Mills, Ont., writes: "I was awfully troubled with fainting and weak spells, and I could never get any doctor's medicines to help me. One day a friend of mine was at the house when I took one of those spells, and she got me a box of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. That was six years ago, and from that day to this I have never had any of those spells. I would not be without your pills for any money, and can highly recommend them to any one."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50¢ a box at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.
