LORRAINE DASHES BAB'S HOPE OF SOCIAL SUCCESS

CHAPTER LX.

With an crush almost staggering, all my doubts which had so long lain quiescent came back to me.

"Shady characters, undesirable acquaintances," Lorraine had called them. I could not very well retort her when I, his wife, had refused to receive them. How ignorant I was of society is apparent in the fact that I had never thought that Neil's peculiar business methods might frustrate my social ambitions. He had money. That was all that was required of him, so I imagined. I would do the rest. And now this!

"You must know if this is so, Bab, even if you do not know much of his affairs. Does he ever bring such men home with him?"

"No—not now."

"Why—not now?"

"Because I refused to receive them."

"I see—then it is true—all of it, I am afraid."

"For heaven's sake, Lorraine, say what you have to say and be done with it!" I cried in desperation. I felt as if a hand had clutched my heart. Yet I would not believe it as bad as Lorraine had hinted. She was a natural gossip—she exaggerated.

"Well Bab, I win! It is the only way. I am more sorry for you than I can say, more than sorry that I encouraged you to think you could make a social success. I am sure, however, that it is of no use for you to go on. You have a lovely home, but the people you have planned to entertain will not visit you—I am afraid," she stopped, I waited in silence. Finally I could stand it no longer.

"Don't be afraid of hurting me, Lorraine. Go on, tell me all you have heard."

"I want you to know it will make no slightest difference in me, in our friendship. You do know that, don't you, Bab?"

"But it is common rumor. A friend of my father's came to him about it because I have been with you so much. This man said that your husband's business methods are 'unsound'—that's father's word. This

TALKING IT OVER

With Lorna Moon

Sowing the First Seed

There was the Tired Business Man who is worth a million dollars, they say, and his very pretty, and exceedingly popular wife; there was the boy who lost his arm and his vitality in France, and twelve-year-old Jamie, whose nerves are jumpy with over study. There was the young man who golfs (it was hard to get him to go, for he thinks that all out of doors should be one big golf links; and you hardly coax him out without that golf bag on his shoulder); I rounded them up in the morning, for they had promised to come with me to sow the first seed of my health harvest.

The Tired Business Man wanted to take a car, but who ever heard of sowing seed from an auto seat! No, no, it was of pussy willows in her hand. The Scene from "The Rosary" which is coming to the Grand Opera House on Wednesday, April 23rd, matinee and night.

Soldier Boy slept all the way home in the comfy car (and he's been taking treatments for insomnia for months). They say I slept - I don't believe it, but I know that the young man who golfs slept because he snored!

CLEANLINESS IS HEALTH

By the use of Gillett's Lye, house cleaning is made a pleasure instead of a drudgery. It softens the water and cleans thoroughly whether the dirt is visible or invisible. Destroys all bacteria and infectious germs, removes obstructions from drain pipes, closets, sinks, etc. Refrigerators are made delightfully fresh and clean by using one teaspoonful of Gillett's Lye dissolved in two gallons of water.

Highly Spoken Of.

The savor of the sea is on Peter Wright's tongue. His acquaintance with the raw facts of experience and human nature, gained in his travels all over the world, gives him a raciness and power which more polished speakers may envy.

His speech is rife with rugged maxims hewn from life.

Talk is cheap, but somehow goes always gains currency.
