SMILES FOR WHIG READERS

NOTHING REMARKABLE
Luxurious tastes De Riche has. He has a Carot in his office. That's nothing. I have a whistler in mine.

NOT DIVINE AFFLATUS
Editor—This isn't poetry my dear man; it's really an escape of gas. Would-be-Contributor—Ah, I see. Something wrong with the meter.

SHE PAVED THE WAY
How did Pa act when you asked him for my hand? Very gentle and courteous. It took me completely by surprise. I told him you used to be a pugilist.

ART
"Mabel's face looks drawn tonight." "I should say it looks painted instead of drawn."

THAT'S FAIR
He: So you're willing to trust yourself to my keeping? She: Yes, as long as you can keep me.

OH JOY
He: We'll never have another quarrel, will we dearest? She: I should say we would; I never dreamed it was so much fun making up.

EUPHEMISTIC
Eyes like diamonds brow of marble, Lips like rubies, teeth of pearl. Put it thus—but do not tell her. She is a "hard featured" girl.

RETURNED WITH THANKS
She—I suppose every profession has its drawbacks. He—Yes, and the drawbacks of the poor of the world are the comebacks.

JUST HORRID
Miss Peach-blow—Did you get a love letter from that soldier that you sent your photograph to? Miss Yellow-leaf—No. Aren't the army censors mean?

CAN USE FIELDERS.
Fohl, of Cleveland Indians, Has Hurlers in Reserve.
Lee Fohl, manager of the Cleveland Indians, a team that has been spoken of frequently in connection with the winning of the 1919 American league pennant, gave out a statement the other day that he needed another pitcher. Then why doesn't he turn around and take a slant at his outfield? Did you know that of the five outfielders every one has been a pitcher?
Jack Grancy started with the Indians as a pitcher in 1903, but stuck his throwing paw in front of a hard batted ball. He was shifted to the outfield and made good.
Joe Woods for years was the premier pitcher of the Red Sox.
Jamieson broke into the American League as a pitching recruit for the Senators. He didn't make good, so was developed into an outfielder.
Tris Speaker pitched a game for the Red Sox near the end of the 1915 season.
Elmer Smith has been pitching grenades at the Huns the last year, and when the Americans and Huns weren't on the field, Elmer pitched for his company's team.

Harness Racing Will Boom.
Providing racing is restored, the harness horsemen will have plenty of racing this year for their charges. Already several circuits are being planned in Ontario, with the Midland section ready to go ahead with their fair circuit. This will include Oshawa, Peterboro, Lindsay, Beaverton, Newmarket and Markham, with dates being allotted in the order named. Purse of $200 and $250 will be hung up by these clubs.
A circuit comprising several one-day meetings is being arranged in Western Ontario, while in Eastern Ontario Kingston is holding a meeting on June 2 and Picton is having a meeting on May 24th. Belleville is putting on three events of $400 purses on June 3.
Galt is also talking of having a two-day meeting beginning on Victoria Day.

Cobourg Town League.
Cobourg will have a town baseball league this season. Last year the teams in the local league put on some good exhibitions of ball, and a goodly number of players are again available for this season. As an incentive to get busy and set the ball rolling a citizen has offered a free trip to Toronto exhibition to the winning team.

Baseball at Belleville.
A senior baseball league has been formed in Belleville with four teams, namely, St. Michael's, Ontarios, G.T.R. and Wanderers. The officers selected were as follows: Hon. president, W. Carnow; president, F. Thompson; first vice-president, H. M. Gain; second vice-president, Dr. O'Callaghan; secretary-treasurer, Angus Buchanan.

Louisville has released Henry Jones, pitcher, to Charlotte of the Carolina Association, and has purchased Edward Carey and John Sullivan from the Chicago White Sox.
Grover Cleveland Alexander was to have pitched the first ball yesterday at Chicago. Vaughn and Cooper were slated as the opposing twirlers.

SPRING TRAINING USELESS.
Cobb, Who Never Goes to Camp, Explains Statement.
Ty Cobb has passed through another spring training siege and still frowns on this feature of baseball. It's all wrong, in his opinion. Cobb believes that southern trips are unnecessary, that better results could be accomplished at home in shorter time and at a considerable saving financially.
It is because of these firm convictions reporting each spring as long as possible, and not that he thinks he should be favored and escape work forced on other players.
"Four and five weeks' drilling, with two sessions almost daily, is carrying conditioning to extremes, and the strain is so great that a player is weakened," said Cobb in an interview at Detroit.
"This is shown often long before the close of the regular season, when players begin to go stale and lack the snap which characterized their play earlier. They spend too much of their energy before the season opens."
"There's an excuse for rushing a boxer and putting him to the limit during his training. He is preparing for one, or at the most two or three contests, and must have reached the highest point of physical fitness when he enters the ring. If it is a ten-round bout he has about thirty minutes of fast work before him."
This also applies to football men. Cobb showed, pointing out that when they train it is for a short season of about two months, with an eight-game schedule considered heavy.
"It is different in baseball," said Cobb. "Here the player faces a season of almost six months, with games daily. His endurance powers are tested to the limit while playing the schedule, and to precede the season with a month of hard work in the South is expecting too much of him."
Ty believes that one reason he has been so successful is that he has avoided much of this spring drudgery, often beginning slowly as a natural consequence, but finishing much stronger generally from August on than most of his rivals. He has more in reserve than and is at his best when ball games count the most if the club should be in the race.
Cobb sees a solution of the spring training problem if players take better care of themselves in winter, and indulge in mild outdoor exercise. Then, according to Ty, long training would not be necessary, but instead just enough work to strengthen the arms and legs and build up the "wind."
