

The Argument Unusual

Economy is a sense of proportion — you can get a steel engraving of King George in a two-cent stamp, but you wouldn't want to hang it on the wall. You can buy a lot of clothes that are cheaper than Livingstons. So can we, but we didn't buy them because they were cheap, we bought them because they weren't, and we recommend them because they are good.

Suits $20 to $45.

White and Khaki Duck Trousers; all sizes.

2 PER CENT. LACKS "KICK"

MAGISTRATE AGREES THAT IT WILL NOT INTOXICATE.

William McQueen Had a Friend With a Little Bottle Who Put the Necessary "Kick" in His Beer.

William McQueen, wearing war decorations, argued in police court on Tuesday morning, that a man could not get under the influence of liquor on two per cent. beer.

"We are both agreed on that point," said Magistrate Farrell.

McQueen was gathered in for being intoxicated late Monday afternoon, by Constable Frederick Clark. A call was received for McQueen from Chatham street, and Constable Clark arrived in time to see McQueen being put out of a house on that street. He was under the influence of liquor.

The accused declared that he had nothing outside of two per cent. beer, but as soon as the magistrate got busy with his cross examination he admitted that a friend had taken something from a small bottle and dumped it into his glass. He had several glasses of beer, and the stuff from the little bottle, which gives a "kick" into the beer, was used on each occasion. McQueen said to his friend, "What are you putting in my beer?" whereupon the friend said, "Norer mind."

McQueen remembered starting for home, but he did not recall getting there. After his drinks, he did not remember anything until he heard the city clock strike three on Tuesday morning. He was then occupying a cell on the police station.

"Who was the man who had the little bottle?" asked the magistrate. "I do not know sir."

"I will remand you for a week then; if you can think of his name by to-morrow morning you will be up again."

William Delcourt was puzzled to know why he was charged with being intoxicated on the street. He said he was on his way home when a policeman gathered him in. This was about 9 p.m. Monday.

Constable Leslie Armstrong who made the arrest told his story. He said Delcourt was staggering on the street. He was doing the "12-3-4" on the walk, and when the constable corralled him he told the officer to go to a climate which is alleged to be even hotter than Kingston. This had been the last three weeks. Constable Armstrong told him it was quite warm enough in Kingston, thank you, and escorted him to the "cooler" at the police station.

Constable James Downey, who had a peep at Delcourt while he was in the cups, corroborated the evidence of Constable Armstrong, as to his condition.

Delcourt told about meeting a farmer, with whom he was going to hire for haying time at $3 a day. They had some drinks together, and he believed that extract of lemon had been put in the beer. He was remanded for three days until the fog clears, so that he will be able to give the magistrate more particulars regarding himself.

SPECIAL BILL AT GRAND.

Wilkes Tabloid Players Are the Headline Attraction.

Wholesome entertainment was provided at the Grand Opera House on Monday afternoon and evening, when the Wilkes Tabloid Players made their first appearance in Kingston. There are thirteen persons in the company, and they provide sprightly and vivacious entertainment. The subject of their sketch on Monday was "Faddy's Troubles," and interspersed were a number of splendid single acts. Miss Rhea Robinson sang a sweet, ingenuitous, played very delicately on the violin. Miss Vonola and Miss Flossie De Veie sang the latest popular songs, being assisted by a "jazzy" chorus. Other members of the company who take leading parts are Fred G. Brown, Frank Spears and "Isale" Wilkes, who states that an entirely different performance, with change of wardrobe, will be in effect each day.

Besides the players, Manager Branigan has booked an exceptionally fine programme of pictures including a William Fox masterpiece entitled, "Mr. Logan, U.S.A.," featuring the Western hero, Tom Mix. Altogether the features for this week have been well chosen and Manager Branigan is doing his best to bring the best that can be secured to the Grand Opera House. The cooling system in the house which has proved so satisfactory is rapidly bringing it a reputation of being a safe retreat for those whose starched shirts or stiff collars show a tendency to wilt.

THEATRICAL

At Griffin's. Many admirers of Bryant Washburn turned out to see him last evening at Griffin's, where he was seen in "Something to Do," his latest hit, and they found the picture to be better than any of his recent successes. Mr. Washburn displays a sort of polite and clever comedy that is characteristic of him, and his role in this picture affords him an excellent opportunity to employ his talents. George Ade's satirical comedy, "Independence B'gosh" proved exceptionally funny, and caused much mirth while being shown, while our very clever comedy was another big hit and thoroughly enjoyed by the audience. See this programme either to-night or to-morrow.—Adv.

At the Strand. Miss Lois Weber, the director of "A Midnight Romance," rented the lobby and grand ball room of the palatial Alexandria Hotel in Los Angeles from midnight until dawn for six days in order to get realism for the hotel scenes of Anita Stewart's latest. Over two hundred players took part in these scenes. Anita Stewart in "A Midnight Romance," plays the part of a mysterious beauty, one of the survivors of a shipwreck, who, in spite of her charm, claims to be but a common servant. Slipping away from the hotel late one night she meets wealthy young Roger Sloan while enjoying a lone dip in the surf. Then she disappears. He finds her again at his hotel, clad in shimmering silks. Then trouble starts! Crooks, blackmailers, police. A real thriller; a beauty, too.—Adv.

A Farewell Social. About one hundred members of the home department of St. James' church bade good-bye on Monday evening to three members of the department who are leaving the city.

Mrs. Harry Christmas, Collingwood street; Mrs. Frederick Hambrook, Alfred street, and Miss Backer, Bagot street. The farewells were said at a social on the rectory lawn, and during the evening fifteen little girls gave a fairy dance, which was greatly admired.

Western Murderess Here. Officer L. G. Carrier and a matron from Prince Albert, Sask., arrived in the city on Tuesday afternoon, with Crispina Buhman, an Austrian, aged twenty-seven years, of Yorkton, Sask., whose sentence of death was commuted to life imprisonment, for the murder of her husband. Proof of her husband's cruelty secured her clemency. She leaves four children, who have been placed in an orphanage.
