The only difference is, the Allies proposed to sink the ships, while the Germans did it.

The senate is certainly inviting disaster. Its vote on the Dyer bill will be watched with great interest.

What to do with the surrendered German battleships was a problem on which the Allies could not agree.

An Indiana man is reported to have died from poisoning due to handling a large amount of paper money.

Excessive profits which many companies have taken from the people of this country during the years of war should be reclaimed.

The public, which has to pay exorbitant prices for food, will have something to say to Sir Robert Borden for drawing fifty per cent. profit on his shares in a cold storage company.

Sir Thomas White has announced that the import and manufacture of oleomargarine will be made legal by special legislation to be brought in.

The surrendered and now sunken German warships were valued at millions of dollars.

The great estates in England are being broken up, and the land is passing from the hands of a few rich men to those of a large number of small owners.

The United States government is reporting to newspaper advertising to secure the needed recruits for its army.

Capital cannot get along without labor, nor labor without capital.

Russia has failed to pay her debt of fifty million dollars to the United States.

This demonstrates one of the great differences between the democratic government and the Bolshevik type.

A NEW AMERICAN CLAIM.

Our cousins to the south of us are nothing if not resourceful, and they certainly like to take all the credit possible for every big event that happens.

From this reasoning our contemporaries assert that the credit of the flight must belong to the United States. Of course they forgot to mention that if Columbus had not discovered America the flight could never have taken place.

We would suggest to these contemporaries that they should not try to hog everything that happens, but should take a little practice in giving credit where it is due.

PEACE

At last Peace has come. In spite of their whining and their arrogant defiance, the Germans have realized that further resistance would be of no avail.

What the immediate results of the coming of peace will be is as yet hard to fathom. The world is still suffering from the agonies caused by the war, and will continue to suffer for many years, nay, for generations.

The rebuilding of France and Belgium, the remaking of shattered homes, and the reconstruction of the entire economic plans of the nations which fought for civilization cannot be accomplished in a day.

Peace has come. The war is a thing of the past. But let not the people of Canada make it a forgotten thing. It should be kept alive in the memory of generation after generation.

And lastly, Canada must not forget that to the supreme being above, the God of freedom and liberty, the God of democracy, they owe the peace which has come.

the God of freedom and liberty, the God of democracy, they owe the peace which has come. Through all the four and a half years of war the knowledge of a righteous and just cause upheld the Allied arms.

Billions Wasted in Worthless Stock.

New York, June 24.—Assertion that "billions of dollars of worthless stock certificates have been circulated broadcast all over the country, cheating the people of their hard earned savings," was made by Alderman William F. Quinn, Republican, in asking the Board of Aldermen to adopt an ordinance intended to place brokers on the New York Curb market under the jurisdiction of the municipal bureau of licenses.

Messrs. Walsh and Danne of the United States, who made the sensational report concerning conditions in Ireland which has been declared to be maliciously false, are followers of the safety-first principle.

St. Catharines, June 24.—The Police Commission decided upon an increase of approximately 15 per cent. in the pay of the local police force, and adopted the two-platoon system for the force, provided enough men can be secured.

An Empire Calendar.

James Oglethorpe, Founder of Georgia, June 25th.

Of the band of loyal and courageous pioneers who obtained royal charters, and at their own expense planted settlements in the American colonies in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, none was more distinguished than James Edward Oglethorpe, who died one hundred and thirty-four years ago to-day.

The son of Sir Theophilus Oglethorpe Edward, after a brilliant career at Oxford, joined the army of Prince Eugene, and on the recommendation of the great Marlborough, became aide-de-camp to the prince. He served with distinction in the campaign against the Turks of 1710-1717, and on his return to England entered Parliament as member for Haslemere.

He devoted his energies and large sums of money to the improvement of the condition of poor debtors, in London prisons, and it was for the purpose of providing an asylum for persons who became insolvent, and for persecuted protestants in foreign countries, that he projected the plan of a settlement, which he named after the ruling monarch George II. George was the last established colony planted in America and by its position it served the purpose of protecting South Carolina from invasion by the Spaniards from Florida, and by the French from Louisiana.

Oglethorpe was granted $50,000 by Parliament to aid his scheme. The first settlement was made at Savannah, under the British soldiers' personal supervision, and restrictions were placed by the House of Commons against the sale of rum or the introduction of slaves into the new colony.

These restrictions were afterwards modified, and Sir James Wright, the last of the royal governors, declared that Georgia was the most flourishing colony on the continent. It was sympathized with the other colonies rather than their own grievances that led the people of Georgia to join the revolutionists.

In later years Oglethorpe got into trouble with the Government over his conduct in connection with the Stuart rising of 1745, but he was absolved of the charges brought against him and raised to the rank of full general.

Turks, who outnumber the Greeks four to one, are driving the Greeks out of Asia Minor. The situation is serious.
