RULES OF RACING MAY BE CHANGED

May Prevent Engagements From Becoming Void If Nominator Dies.

Through the action of Lord Jersey, the English Jockey Club now has under consideration an amendment to that archaic, out-of-date rule of racing which makes an entry void on the death of the nominator, even when the horse has been sold and the buyer is living and wishes to keep the nomination alive by assuming the liability of the original nominator. At a recent meeting Lord Jersey gave notice of a motion to change the rule so that when yearlings or foals having engagements are sold, their engagements may be transferred to the purchasers by putting on record in the registry office a notice of such transfer, signed by both seller and buyer. The proposed amendment will be voted on at the annual meeting of the Jockey Club.

Large numbers of British breeders and horsemen have always objected to the present rule as being detrimental to racing because it frequently operates to blight or mar the turf career of some great horse, but the Jockey Club has let it stand unchanged from time immemorial, and even now the chances are thought to be about even that the proposed amendment will be rejected when it comes to the final test.

How the rule works was illustrated in the case of St. Simon, of whom it has been said by so high an authority as Captain M. M. Hayes, that he was one of the two greatest race horses that ever lived. His name does not appear among the winners of the Derby, St. Leger or any of the so-called classic races of the English turf, because he was barred from starting by the fact that after entering him Prince Bathurst, his breeder, died before the races were run. It mattered not that the colt had been sold to the Duke of Portland, who was, of course, able and willing to assume all of St. Simon's engagements. The entries were void on the death of the original nominator, and that ended it. All his new owners could do was to find less important engagements for him in late closing races and leave the Derby, St. Leger and other classics to horses that did not class with St. Simon.

Frank Darcy Dead.
Word from Sydney, Australia, announces the death from flu of Frank Darcy, brother of the late Les Darcy, and who was considered successor to Les as middleweight champion of Australia.

Darcy had been matched to fight Jimmy Clabby, of America, when both were taken down with the flu. Clabby recovered and is now matched to fight Tommy Uren for the championship of the Antipodes.

Sleepless Nights Overcome By Safe Method

SUGGESTIONS GIVEN WHEREBY INSOMNIA CAN BE SAFELY AND QUICKLY CURED.

Worried, overwork, overstudy and indigestion cause insomnia.

Healthy, natural sleep can't be produced by drugs.

First, the blood circulation must be improved.

Congestion of blood in the head must be removed.

Irritation in the brain must be relieved.

It's because Ferrozone equalizes circulation, because it soothes the irritation, because it removes congestion that it does cure insomnia.

For building blood and nerve, for instilling force and life into over-worked organs, for establishing strength and vitality, where can you find anything so efficient as Ferrozone?

Remember, sleep is just as important as food.

You must sleep, or break down, but if you'll use Ferrozone and thereby remove the conditions which keep you from sleep, you'll get well quickly.

Ferrozone is not a narcotic, not a dope; it is a health-giving tonic that any child or delicate woman can use. Absolutely safe is Ferrozone.

Take it for a month, take it for a year—no harm, but immeasurable good will result.

To sleep well, look well, feel well, to be free from depression, nervousness or blues—use Ferrozone. It's a food tonic, a healer to the weak and wretched, a boon to the sleepless—sold in 50c. boxes, six for $2.50, at all dealers.

COMMISSION THE SOLDIERS' AID

has been incorporated by the Province of Ontario for the purpose of assisting to reinstate discharged officers and men in civil life.

EMPLOYMENT.

We cordially invite the co-operation of the public in the important work of securing employment for soldiers who have been discharged from military service.

VOCATIONAL TRAINING.

Classes for the vocational re-education of soldiers who have been so disabled as to prevent them from resuming their former occupations are provided free of cost, and in addition, the support of the soldier and his dependants is provided during the period of retraining and for one month after.

Further information as to courses may be obtained from W. W. Nichol, Superintendent of Education, 118 College Street, Toronto.

RELIEF FUND.

Donations for the assistance of soldiers' families in temporary distress will be thankfully received and acknowledged, and should be made payable to the order of the Commission.

TO DRAW COLOR LINE

Dempsey to Accept Challenges From Any White Men Only.

In the first statement he has made since becoming the heavyweight champion of the world, Jack Dempsey announced that he would draw the color line. He will pay no attention to negro challengers, but will defend his title against any white heavyweight as the occasion demands. Dempsey said that he would not fight for seven months at least.

The challenger and his manager, Jack Kearns, left for Cincinnati, where Dempsey will open a vaudeville engagement. It is stated that he is to receive $7,000 for his week's appearance. Kearns received several telegrams making theatrical offers to the new champion.

The largest of these offers came from a vaudeville agent in Los Angeles, who offered the champion $10,000 a week for twelve weeks. Kearns stated that this sounded very attractive, and Dempsey may accept the offer. The tour will include all the leading cities on the Pacific Coast.

After Dempsey finishes his engagement in Cincinnati he will accept a week's engagement with a circus now showing through the Middle West. After that he may accept the coast offer. Eventually, Dempsey will arrive in New York, where he expects to be a theatrical attraction. Almost all the other champions have made a lot of money through theatrical engagements, and Dempsey does not propose to let the grass grow under his feet.

WILLARD HAS NO EXCUSE TO OFFER FOR HIS DEFEAT

Jess Willard says: "I haven't an excuse in the world to offer. The better man won in a hard, fair fight. The pitcher went to the well once too often. Youth was served. In the advantages of weight, reach and stature given to me by nature I believed I was invincible. I learned my mistake as Jeffries learned his at Reno."

"Perhaps it would have been better if I had trained differently, but I don't think so. I assumed full responsibility for my own training for the direction of my fight and for everything connected with it. There isn't a precaution I could think of that I failed to take. I had a loyal group of men around me and they served me devotedly up to the last."

"I can't remember exactly when I began to slip. It must have come with Dempsey's right to the jaw early in the first round. After that I was dazed and could not get my bearings. Once in a while I felt my head clearing, and instinctively struck out the long left that had served so well in previous fights. When I saw my opponent slipping easily past that, and felt him pounding my body, I realized for the first time that unless I landed a lucky blow I would surely lose."

"I did try again and again to land such a punch, putting all my fading strength into right upper cuts, but the luck was not with me and one of these got home. Then the loss of blood from my wounded eye commenced to offset me. My right eye was almost closed and was useless to me. I could see a dancing shape before me, but it was impossible to note its movements closely. My breathing became labored and apparently my nervous system became disorganized."

"To all purposes the fight ended in the first round. After that I was Ray Archer and Walter Monaghan wanted me to quit long before. After the third round, when I felt my strength slipping away swiftly and surely, I gave my consent to their action in tossing a towel into the ring."

"As I say, I may have reduced too fast and too much, but I haven't a single alibi in that respect. I wouldn't say a word if I could, to detract in the slightest way from Jack Dempsey. He fought a grand, fearless battle."

COCKSURE EXPERTS TRY TO EXPLAIN THEIR BAD GUESS

By Dempsey's victory it has again been unquestionably demonstrated that the hulking, slow-footed, phlegmatic Willard is utterly lacking in the fighting instinct. His huge stature availed him nothing. His great advantage in height, weight, and reach was offset by the rushing, two-handed whalloping of the challenger. He was outclassed and worse. It would seem that the big cowboy got into the ring for the purpose of collecting $100,000.

The cocksure "experts" who said that Dempsey was a "no-account," "had never whipped anybody of any consequence," "was a press agent boxer," etc., etc., are having an unhappy time of it in view of the quick and decisive beating administered to Willard, in framing their explanations.

English Girls Learn to Shoot.

London girls are learning to shoot. A great number of young women employed in the city offices devote a portion of their luncheon hour in practice at Sir Charles Wakefield's range on the Embankment by Blackfriars Bridge. They receive free instructions, but pay eight cents for ten rounds of ammunition.

In pre-war days the London woman who could shoot was quite an exception to the rule. The majority of women kept as far away from a rifle as possible, and as to firing one that was entirely out of the question.

To-day they monopolize the range during luncheon hours to the exclusion of men, and take delight in pouring the tiny leaden pellets into the targets painted to resemble Kaiser Bill, the Crown Prince, Von Hindenburg and other German notables.
