A UNIQUE STRETCHER PARTY.

Capt. O'Kelly Used Huns to Help in Humane Task.

When a soldier wins a Victoria Cross, and the account of the deed for which it was awarded is printed in the papers, there usually springs up a crop of other yarns that go the rounds of the army, which relate further adventures of the winner of the most coveted honor in the world.

The following story about Capt. Christopher Patrick O'Kelly, V.C., M.C. was told me by a friend who was in France a year ago. Whether it is true or not, Capt. O'Kelly has never said. But hundreds have sworn to its veracity in the telling of it.

At Passchendaele, on October 26, 1917, after O'Kelly had led his company of the 2nd Battalion up to the rescue of the 4th C.M.R. to right flank, (and so won his V.C.) Lt.-Col. W. W. Foster, D.S.O., and bar, the O.C. of the 2nd made a tour of inspection of his battalion's new position.

Accompanied by another company officer, Col. Foster proceeded to a shell-hole to shell-hole, and advanced a considerable distance out into No Man's Land, studying the enemy's position as well as his own. Suddenly the officer with him fell, dangerously wounded from a sniper's bullet. Col. Foster signaled a warning to him. But too late! With revolver poised in front of him, O'Kelly strode on, peering into all the shell-holes he passed.

By this time, all the troops had their eyes on him. They saw him zig-zagging among the shell-holes, peering right and left. Suddenly he halted and leaned forward.

And up out of a shell-hole rose three Germans, their hands in the air.

O'Kelly led these three back to where Col. Foster knelt beside the wounded officer, and said: "Here's three, sir! If you'll wait a moment, I'll get another!"

But Col. Foster, torn with anxiety over this manoeuvre, ordered O'Kelly to take cover. And the three Huns aided by the colonel and O'Kelly succeeded in bearing the wounded officer safely to our lines.

Deserters Were Shot. Hon. Hugo Guthrie stated in the Canadian House of Commons recently that he had been informed that a number of Canadian deserters overseas had been executed. Others had received sentences up to 30 years. He said that punishments in England were more severe than in this country. Gen. Hughes said they had been tried by court-martial and shot, both in England and at the front.

Gen. S. C. Mewburn said that he did not want the impression to go abroad that a large number of Canadian soldiers had been shot overseas. He understood that during the time that Gen. Hughes was Minister of Militia men were tried by court-martial and shot on being found guilty. No such cases had occurred since he became Minister.

Mr. Guthrie said there were Canadian soldiers who had been discharged with a variety of offences. He went on to say that in Canada there were a great many cases in which the defaulter had been more or less technical, but some had resisted arrest with firearms and other weapons.

Mr. E. B. Devlin, Wright, interrupted to ask the Solicitor-General how many Canadian soldiers were shot in England. Mr. Guthrie said he had no official information, he had simply been told that there were some.

Gen. Hughes asked if there were no returns made to the Government of Canada before the sentences were carried out. Mr. Guthrie replied that these cases never came before him, except in appeals for clemency.

Helium Used in War.

Prof. McLellan of Toronto University, who was invited by the British Admiralty in 1915 to investigate the possibility of large scale production of helium, found large quantities available in natural gas in Ontario and Western Canada, producible at a cost of a shilling per cubic foot. The United States also co-operated and gave large orders for machinery and plant. Thus the possibility of securing large supplies of helium was assured simultaneously with the practical details of production.

Airships inflated with helium have been developed by the British navy and the progress made warrants the opinion that in another year large quantities of helium will be produced in Canada at a low price and helium-filled ships will be in service. Helium is a non-inflammable gas, less buoyant than hydrogen, but much safer. Before the war it cost from $1,500 to $6,000 per cubic foot.

Named in "Best Seller." Major James A. Anand of the 15th Battalion has been honored by having one of the most popular and widely selling books of the day, "The Secret City," dedicated to him by the author, Mr. Hugh Walpole. "The Secret City," which is a story of the upheaval in Russia, has now passed the 100,000 mark in sales in Great Britain, and is reported to be selling equally well in the United States, Canada and Australia.

Major Anand, who is a former Toronto newspaper man, was wounded at St. Julien, and was afterwards on special work for the British War Office.
