

Bass-Oreno

Have you heard about it? It dives, dashes, darts and wiggles just like an injured fish. Probably the secret of the success of this bait is its extremely erratic motions. Several hundreds thousand have been sold.

Get Yours To-day

The back-lash which occurs so persistently when using an ordinary reel has done more to discourage the sport of casting than even that oft-mooted question:

"Why Don't They Bite"

Now we have a Reel that won't backlash, and you don't have to thumb your line. The caster has only to learn to throw his bait properly.

The South Bend Anti-Back-Lash Reel

thumbs itself with a greater precision and accuracy than can be done by the most experienced angler.

Dempsey Tells How He Defeated Jess Willard

"I had to hit him, for there, before me, stood the only person in the world between me and the heavy-weight championship. So I cocked my right, took one look at that battered face, closed my eyes and then let go. I couldn't bear to see that blow land."

That is how Jack Dempsey brought to a dramatic conclusion his story of the fight in which he won the heavy-weight championship at Toledo, Ohio from Jess Willard. Jack was not bragging, neither was he playing for effect. He was merely telling how he won his laurels.

"I was pretty nervous when I went into the ring," admitted the Salt Lake mauler, "and it seemed to me that my nervousness increased as the time dragged before the first round. As I stepped up to Willard I had in mind his reported ability to hit and hit hard. That is why I showed so much respect for his punches at the beginning."

"You remember that I ran away from Jess's first lead, a straight left. You may also recall how I stepped back when he led the second time. And then we mixed and Jess landed on me twice. Right then and there my confidence returned, and my nervousness disappeared."

"I figured to myself that if he could not hit any harder than those two blows it was up to me to waste him and away punches. I didn't even have to sway, for Jess seemed to lose his steam, and all of his boxing ability, when I landed that first one which upset him."

"As I looked down at that big man on the canvas I quickly made up my mind that this fight was all mine, and all that I had to do was to go out and win it. From then on I just plastered him until, at the end of the first round, I was sure I had done enough. In fact, I started to leave the ring. But when they called me back there was nothing for me to do but to go in and finish the job."

"It was the toughest job I ever had in my life, and that is why I closed my eyes when I let go with the final wallop that brought me the championship."

Where the concrete rises athwart his face;
Where he can't dig holes with a rusty knife,
When he hears the sound of a thrilling strife;

Hey, Jim?

Longboat to Race Quaal

Toronto Star: The long lost Tom Longboat is found. The famous big Indian galloper for whom the G.A.C. has been searching for a week turned up smiling and all in Toronto with a laconic, "What's doing?"

Three mile race with Billy Quaal, Tom, at the Island Stadium Friday night.
"Bright," and away he went. He looks to be ready to gallop and as he made no comment the distance must suit him. If Quaal is as good as the Indian there will be a pretty duel.

German Yachtsmen Barred by British for Next Decade

There is great interest among British yachtsmen in the international conference to which they have invited representatives of leading American, Norwegian, Swedish and Danish clubs to attend. There is especial hope expressed that the New York Yacht Club will see its way clear to assisting in international action.

There is not the smallest probability of British sportsmen of the present generation ever racing against German yachtsmen again. This is important because before the war Germany considered herself second only to England in European yachting. In January of the present year the Beckett-Goddard fight was revealed to him in a dream. "On the night before the fight," he says, "I dreamed that Beckett had knocked out Goddard in the second round. The dream impressed me little at the time, but later I gave a sealed envelope to my man servant to open when he received the result the following morning. In the envelope was 'Beckett knocks out Goddard in the second round,' which, of course, tallied with the actual results."

Result Revealed in Dream.
A London, England, correspondent to the New York Sun declares that Lord Newburgh states that the results of the Beckett-Goddard fight was revealed to him in a dream.

The O.R.F.U.
Toronto News: The Ontario Rugby Union will be doing business at the old stand, when the weak-kneed Inter-Provincial Union, which like the National Hockey Association, an Eastern controlled concern, is hanging for cover. The O.R.F.U. kept the football flag flying, all through the war, but the "Big Four" so-called did a "willard" as soon as the clouds began to darken. In times past the O.R.F.U. developed the players and the Inter-Provincial gobbled 'em up and their methods were not always above board either.

Heavyweight Challenge.
Ben Martin, heavyweight champion, of the American Expeditionary Force and winner of the Inter-Allied championship at the Pershing Stadium, Paris, has issued a challenge to the winner of the Carpenter-Dick Smith fight. If he fails to obtain a match in Paris, Martin says he will return to America and attempt to meet Jack Dempsey.
