Illiterates In Canadian Army.

Illiteracy in the United States army was so prevalent that a committee was appointed by the Government to compile statistics of it. They found 700,000 men in the drafted army who were not only unlettered, but were ignorant of most of the elementary facts of existence. The committee concluded its work by discovering that there are nearly 4,000,000 native-born men and women in the United States who can neither read nor write.

Illiteracy in the Canadian army was so slight that it was never necessary to compile statistics of it. The soldier who could neither read nor write was so rare a member in the Canadians that he constituted no problem to anyone but the regimental padre, who spent his free hours teaching the rare illiterate the three R's.

Col. John I. McLaren, the A.A.G. of Toronto Military District, who has had wide experience among the troops since the outset, says:—

"Illiteracy has never been a problem. Now and again a man would turn up who had to make his 'mark' on military documents, being unable to write. But such were extremely rare."

A paymaster of a Canadian battalion says:—

"About five thousand men have come under my notice. Only three could not sign their names. Two of these were foreigners."

All officers who have censored letters for the troops know that Canadians can write letters, in fact, are prolific writers! And while spelling was in many cases a careless art, the letter indicating extreme ignorance was an infrequent find. Among the troops were many veritable Chesterfields, whose letters were masterpieces in composition.

As the Canadian corps was drawn indiscriminately from the backwoods settlements as well as the cities, from the mining camps of the north as well as the collegiate towns of the long-settled older provinces, the high standard of education and intelligence disclosed in the war effort is most gratifying.

Complete amnesty for all soldiers, sailors and marines convicted by court-martial, except those whose offenses would be a felony under federal statutes, is proposed in a bill introduced by U.S. Senator Chamberlain, Democrat.

CANADIAN OFFICER GETS U. S. AWARD
Major Walter Miller, of Toronto, who was awarded the D.S.M. by the Washington Government for the exceptional and distinguished service rendered the United States army while serving as liaison officer between the British Embassy, the Ministry of Militia and Defence, and the War Department.

An Excellent Investment.

There is nothing more inspiring and improving to a young student of music than to hear a piece which he is studying performed by a really great artist. More may be learned by example, even unconsciously, than the most skilful and conscientious teacher could impart in a lesson. It is not an extravagance to spend money freely to hear good concerts or in the purchase of records by the best artists.
