LIEUT.-COL. H. E. PENSE INCIDENTS OF

e Officers Unanimously Chose Him and Brig.-Gen. Williams Has Appointed Him to the Position.

LIEUT.-COL. H. E. PENSE Lt.-Col. Henry Edward Pense D.S.O., M.C., is the new officer commanding the 14th Regiment Priness of Wales Own Rifles, Kingston, ie succeeds Lt.-Col. W. Y. The trouble today is that sugar can-M.D., No. 3, had selected Lt.-Col Pense as the logical commanding officer, but Col. Pense desired time to consider the matter, and at a meeting of the officers of the Regiment held at the Armouries Thursday evening he was the unanimous choice, offi-cers who, under the militia system were senior, waived their rights in his favor. It was the general opinion that the commanding officer ought to be one who had seen service in the war just closed, and, if possible, one UPON THE EXCELLENCE OF ITS who commanded a unit in the field. Col. Pense thanked the officers for expressing their appreciation of his services and stated that while he Miss Clara Byrnes, of New York, would like to see the C.E.F. units perpetuated, still he had a warm attachment to the old 14th, in which he first enlisted as a private, and he hoped to see it reorganized and be a rallying point in the city as it had

The first duty he will be called up-on to perform will be to provide a Guard of Honor for the Prince of Wales on the occasion of his visit in Kingston in October. It is hoped that the guard of honor will be composed entirely of overseas men. The band casting one of the stereotype plates is to be reorganized at once and it is expected that there will be a good he hopes to put into practical form as soon as suitable rooms in the ar-preparing, fitting and adjusting Toronto Star.

The retirement of Mr. Nickle, of Kingston, from parliament is much to be regretted. While his affiliations are with the Conservative party he is an independent in the true sense, a man of strong convictions, as resolute as he is quiet in manner. Making no parade of independence, he occasioned surprise by the determination with which he adhered to his convictions and followed up his speech with his vote. Parliament needs such men and vote. Parliament needs such men and the country needs them.

Why does he retire? Any one who knows Ottawa knows that it is not a very comfortable place for an independent man. If a man speaks and votes steadily with the government or the opposition he has his steady friends and comrades, ready to cheer him in the house, and giving him companionship outside. If he wants to speak, either the government or the leader of the opposition will find the occasion, and he will be sure to catch the eve of the speaker.

the occasion, and he will be sure to catch the eye of the speaker.

The man of real independence, on the other hand, leads a somewhat lonely life at Ottawa. He lacks the moral (or sometimes unmoral) support of the members of a party. He has no satisfaction except that of choosing his own path and walking in it. All the more should he be supported by the press and the public, and encouraged to maintain his own independence and the independence of parliament. We suppose it is too of parliament. We suppose it is too late for Mr. Nickle to change his resolution for the present. But we hope his severance from public life is not permanent. The country needs him, and more like him.

Miss Clara Byrnes, of the National Municipal League and Hunter College, New York City, one of the delegates to the Convention of Canadian Municipalities, on Thursday availed herself of the Whig's invitation to the general public to call at the office and inspect the new press in action. WHAT IS INNOCENCE?

Cynics say there is no such a thing. Optimists insist there is. Whittmore, an artist, actually thought that he had found it in a reform school for wayward girls. Surely, those pretty laughing creatures, dancing around a may-pole must be sweet, innocent young girls. Particularly, shy Nadine. So he painted Nadine's picture. Rupert Hughes in "Innocense" tells what Whittmore found out. A good story for pessimists or optimists to read.

He stated that he never cast any reflections upon politicians and his remarks/were only addressed to the returned soldiers whom he lauded for their service. their heroism and sacrifice, and for whom he said nothing was too good. As to the suggestion that he should stand for parliament he said there was nothing whatever in it. He was a soldier first, last and all the time, and would never consider the accep ance of a nomination. He declared that his brief address was entirely misrepresented. He had no complaint to make about the Government, but he did think that greater considera-tion should be shown to soldiers by the general public in the matter of employment. It was the attitude of the public toward the returned man that he complained of.
