FEAST OF THE OLD FOLKS INCIDENTS OF THE DAY

AT THE HOUSE OF PROVIDENCE THURSDAY AFTERNOON.

Prizes Were Given the Aged Inmates for Dancing—A Committee of Ladies Was in Charge of the Event.

A committee of enthusiastic and charitably disposed ladies, convened for the purpose of feasting the good old men and women at the House of Providence met with the highest acclaim from all who witnessed the happiness of these tottering individuals assembled in their respective dining halls on Thursday afternoon. The affair was so ably managed that an abundance of appetizing foods were served. The most unique feature of the festival was the "Old Folk Dancing," which was rendered in the good old-fashioned style. For the moment, advanced age and infirmities were forgotten and the trim little matron and the snow-haired baron returned an agile step to the charmingly blended music of piano and victrola. This splendid instrument was recently donated by E. Kelly, Brockville, in memory of his deceased wife. His special object in presenting the victrola was to give amusement to the aged and afflicted of the House of Providence, knowing their condition deprived them of musical solace.

A pleasing addition to the programme was the distribution of prizes won by the best performers: Mary Tallon, basket of fruit; Lizzie Storms, cake; M. A. McCarthy, cake; Mrs. Conway, box of chocolates; Mary McGowan, cake; Annie Mulligan, basket of fruit; John Canning, fancy pipe; Cob. Gorman, tobacco; John Gaffney, tobacco; Jas. Lawless, pipe and tobacco; Peter Milne, tobacco; Bobby, candy.

Michael Dever rendered several pleasing selections on the violin despite his rheumatic condition. In the men's department the aged smokers received with delight and thankfulness a generous gift of tobacco, while equal gratitude was expressed by the old ladies for a liberal treat of candy.

The success of this enjoyable day speaks volumes for the loyalty and persevering efforts of the committee who devoted so much time to canvassing and preparing for the festival. The following ladies deserve special mention: Miss Ida Shaw, Mrs. F. Grimshaw, Mrs. Fitzmartin, Mrs. Shaw, Mrs. P. Alken, Mrs. Macdonville, Mrs. Macdonald, Mrs. Kane, Mrs. Milne, Mrs. Martin, Mrs. Gratton, Misses B. Shaw, B. Toner and L. Macdonald.

The Mother Superior and Sisters thank the members of the committee and gratefully acknowledge the contributions of generous citizens and friends.

Prince of Wales Hears Something About Kingston

If the Prince of Wales was to be taken on a drive through the city by the Board of Works, this is what the chauffeur might overhear:

"Well, Prince, old boy, we're going to give you a whirl over the city roads that we've patched up. I was made boss of the whole blamed business. The aldermen knew what they were doing when they laid their hands upon their Uncle Dudley and told him to go to it. Well, he went at it with a bang and has had hard work keeping some slow old pokes out of the way, see. Well, here we're on King street, named after one of the English kings. I don't know which one, for I'm better at mathematics than history. There's that blamed old Whig! Pretty nice building and nifty newspaper, but I'll get his goat yet for the way it has poked me because I wanted to put tarvia on the roads instead of asphalt oil. By the way, Prince, what do they use on the roads of the town where you live—but I suppose you don't bother about such things.

"Well, here we are now on Princess street, called after one of your family. On that corner down there, the Orangemen of this old burg built an arch with King William banners on it when your granddad came here in 1860, but they wouldn't let him land and drive under the arch, so he stayed on the steamer out in the harbor there. Some say he landed at night, but the captain of the ship says he didn't, see! By the way, Prince, we've got the ship that carried good King Edward up and down the river and the lake. It's a wrecking vessel now and owned by my friend John Donnelly. If you would like a sail on the old tub, I'll arrange with him to take your Highness out for a spin on the harbor.

"Now we're over to Queen's College. Down there is the new arts building. Your own dad laid the corner stone of that edifice one fine October morning in 1901, and was raised to the rank of an LL.D. of this historic seat of learning, which received its charter at the hands of your great-grandmother away back in 1841, before my time. I understand they are going to give you a degree, too, but I bet you would rather have a game of golf or a fish than spend an hour in a college on a fine day like this. Eh, Prince?"

"I hope you'll excuse my plain talk, Prince, my boy, but I'm so used to ripping up our city council that I get accustomed to calling a spade a spade and keeping the mayor in his place. Well, here we are, Prince, at our destination. We've all been invited over here to see you graduated, and we'll whoop it up when you come out on the platform. So long!"
