

Early Fall Buying of Overcoats Advisable

We are prepared with the first showing of Fall and Winter OVERCOATS, featuring the finest makes in Canada. It's never too early to buy, when early buying saves you from 15 to 30 per cent.

Our showing of Fall and Winter Overcoats is a powerful move against the upward trend of the price of good clothes.

All you need to do to enjoy exceptional price advantages is to buy early—a month or two earlier than has been your habit—in other words, RIGHT NOW, when it pay you to buy.

Theatrical

At the Grand.
A big double bill is booked at the Grand for to-night. Harry Carey in his latest and best production "Ace of the Saddle," a tale of the plains and hills of the Far West, combined with many thrilling scenes. This feature is Mr. Carey's best and all who remember his fine work in "Riders of Vengeance," will be pleased to learn that he is being shown at the Grand. Albert Ray, the talented artist of the Fox Film Corporation will be shown also, in a five reel feature, "Words and Music," a delightful story of love and adventure, intermingled with some light comedy touches, which add greatly to the entertaining value of the picture. Comedy and other reels will also be shown. This exceptional programme will be completed by vaudeville, consisting of four girls in a musical and singing act at the Grand for the first three days of this week.—Advt.

At Griffin's.
A photoplay of exceptional interest to motion picture lovers will be shown at Griffin's to-day, Tuesday and Wednesday, when William S. Hart will be seen in "Square Deal Sanderson," a real red-blooded story of ranch life in Arizona and New Mexico. It abounds in thrilling situations, in suspenseful moments and affords the star a wonderful opportunity for fast riding, shooting and roping. The picture is said to be one of Bill Hart's best, and the role he portrays one of the strongest in which he has ever appeared. In addition to the above feature to-day will mark the inauguration of three acts of the best vaudeville that can be procured. Doris Oliver, in a character song cycle, is of superior merit and new to Kingston audiences. Amedeo, known as the wizard of the violin, provides some excellent music, and Hagan & Wilson, in a novelty musical act, complete a bill which cannot be excelled in any showhouse in Canada, and there is no advance in prices.—Advt.

At the Strand.
"The Microbe," the latest Metro production starring Viola Dana, will be the feature at the Strand theatre on Monday next. This picture was adapted from the popular story of the same name by Henry Altimus, published in Ainslie's Magazine, and is the dramatic and heart-rending story of The Microbe, a girl of the New York slums who is rescued from her unsavory surroundings by a young author in search of local color. Her quick wit and winsome personality, coupled with the ease with which she acquires polish and refinement in her new environment, quickens his interest in her—an interest which soon deepens into something deeper. In fact, De Witt finds himself fast falling in love with his protégée. This state of affairs is also evident to Judith Winthrop, a young widow whose matrimonial designs center on the author. Jealousy leads her to treachery and deceit and the Microbe is forced to leave the home she has grown to love. Startling events follow in rapid succession—each one more amazing than the last until a tremendous climax lays bare the treachery which has embittered the life of the girl who at last finds complete happiness and love.—Advt.

"PER ARDUA AD ALTA."
The toll of a weary day was done. With labour o'erborne, with care hard pressed
My wearied body and brain craved rest;
And I laid me down with the setting sun.
Yet still—in the realms of welcome sleep,
My restless spirit prolonged the strife;
Seeking that "Something," which gives to life
Meaning, and joy, and content full deep.
At the throne of Power I took my stand
With shrinking I gazed on its face so cold;
For I thought of the ruin and woe untold
That its worshippers work on a suffering land.
And a voice, like the notes of an organ rolled—
Echoing through the realms of sleep,
"Power is not life," said the tones so deep.
And I turned my steps to the walk of gold.

I looked on the slaves who worshipped here,
Groaning o'er toll that would not cease.
"Gold cannot give thee rest or peace"
The voice of my dreams rang loud and clear.
On Fame and Pleasure I gazed awhile!
"Have ye aught worthier than Gold to give?"
"Soul of mine, there's is no life to live!"
And methought each face was a mocking smile.
Prone I fell down at the feet of love
"Only thyself are left!" I cried,
Gently Love raised me, the while replied—
"Not so; lift now thine eyes above."
And lo, a great army arrayed in white,
With faces serene; a noble throng—
Lifted on high their voices strong,
Eyes all aglow with a radiant light.
"We have cast aside the sham for the real,
The greatest treasure in life to hold,
This only will give thee joy untold—
A noble purpose, a high ideal!"

Easter Egg Of Death.
The city of Paris, a few years before the war, presented the late Czar of Russia with an Easter egg containing Jewels to the value of $10,000. The same year one of his revolutionary subjects sent him an egg stuffed with dynamite, timed to explode at a certain hour. The weight of the egg aroused suspicion, and a tragedy was averted by the secret police opening the egg and discovering its contents.—Tit-Bits.
