The Luck of Geraldine Laird

BY KATHLEEN NORRIS,

Author of "The Story of Julia Page," "Heart of Rachel," "Josselyn's Wife," "Sisters," etc.

Nothing for her to do, obviously, but drop the matter. But that was just what she could not do. All through one May night she sat at her open window, staring out into the lights of the drive, watching them vanish one by one, and the stars brighten and wane, and thinking of life, and of great wars, and of what love means to men and women.

"Perhaps," her idle thoughts ran, "perhaps a man and a woman aren't intended to live together--perhaps we make a mistake in trying it. The sexes are much less alike than people think. Women really don't like the things that men do, women really feel differently about all the laws that govern them. Perhaps there's a better way of managing things--a way that would keep all that beautiful and wonderful relationship free of sordid details--ice-boxes and babies' naps and company dinners!

"But some one had to manage the household," she reasoned, "and take up the endless details of laundry and grocery and service--which ought it be? The less wage-earner? No, that wouldn't do! A house-keeper perhaps, a really well-paid person, who would take the responsibility of--say--five or six such establishments as mine, in such an apartment-house as this one. Then let the dissatisfied member argue with her--but they wouldn't argue!" she interrupted herself with sure scorn. "It's because they can't offend their wives, that men are so critical at home! The instant the relationship with their housekeeper was a purely business one, we should see a change.

A strange paleness began to flow over the sleeping city, the black nothingness became a gray nothingness, and dim shapes suddenly stood out against the mass. A dull metallic sheen smote the river, and Geraldine saw in the soft bulky shadow that was the long line of apartment houses, an occasional attic window show a gold light. The city's domestics were sleepily preparing for the new day. She did not wait to see it. Chilled

Aches and Pains of Rheumatism Sometimes Almost Unbearable.

There are weather conditions that make rheumatism worse. They are not the same in the cases of all persons. Some victims of this disease suffer more in dry warm weather than in moist cold weather, but all suffer more or less all the time.

The cause of rheumatism is an excess of uric acid in the blood, affecting the muscles and joints. Hence the blood must have attention for permanent results in the treatment of this disease.

and cramped in the gray dawning she stumbled to her bedroom, darkened the windows, drew the fluffy covers warmly about her, and lost all consciousness of responsibility and trouble--in sleep.

The next morning she had just finished dressing, and was regarding herself with some content, in the mirror, when Selma announced a caller.

"Mr. -- who?" Geraldine asked, wrinkling her fine brows.

"He said to say a friend of Mr. Redding, Madame."

"Oh--!" A little wave of warmth and pleasure rose in her heart. She caught up her great flowered knitting-bag, dropped a handkerchief into it, and her small shopping bag, and with a rush of fragrance and eagerness, and with a smile ready, went into the drawing-room. A squarely-built man in the now familiar olive-drab, with his back to the bright light of the window, rose to meet her. It was not until she had given him her hand, and was looking straight up into his face, that she saw that it was Dean.

"Dean!" she cried, with her questioning fingers, wide-like, on his sleeve. "I--didn't know--?"

"Didn't know I was in it?" he stammered, more moved than she had ever seen him in his life. "Are you--are you sorry?"

"No," Geraldine was still looking straight up into his face. "No, I'm glad," she said, moving backward a step to study his coat-sleeve, her voice hardly above a whisper. "What I never seem to know! What are you?"

He folded his arms with a gesture she well remembered and the big firm mouth widened into a smilish half-humorous, and half-grim.

"In the ranks," he answered. "Just one of the ten million! And Jerry--! If before I went you could say that you forgive me!"

Geraldine had half turned away and now she put down the bag she was carrying and came back to him with free hands.

"I think--" She held them both out to him, and her own eyes suddenly misted. "I think I can say that!" she said.

"My wife!" she heard him say, his voice thickened and incoherent. Then his arms were about her again, in the old way, and their lips were together.

"My wife! My own dear girl back again!" Dean said, trying to laugh after a while, as he held her off to look at her, and quite openly dried his eyes. "Jerry--if you could know how I've longed for you!"

St. Mark's Church, Deseronto. Deseronto, Sept. 23.--The Harvest Thanksgiving services at St. Mark's church, Deseronto, were very enjoyable. The church was most tastefully decorated by the Chancel Guild. The music was good, the services hearty and the Rev. T. J. O'Connor Penton, B.D. a former rector, preached two good sermons. The musical portions of the services will be repeated Sunday next. Archdeacon Radcliffe, preached two stirring sermons at St. Mark's to good congregations.

Revolutionary Resolution Reported. Hamilton, Sept. 25.--A resolution placing the Dominion Trades and Labor Congress on record as favoring the Soviet form of government, demanding the withdrawal of troops from Russia and refusing financial and other aid to "reactionary governments," was reported to the committee on resolutions after an abortive attempt had been made to have it "placed on file."

The Women's Trade Union league of Philadelphia is one of the largest and most active branches of the national body. It has organized trade unions of office workers waitresses, upholsterers, cigarette makers, and school teachers, and has assisted in the organization of machinists, telegraphers, awning hatters, dressmakers, uniform makers, leather workers, millinery workers, bindery, bakers and textile workers.

O-Cedar Polish

Keeps new furniture looking "new"

THAT first finish which so delights you when a fine new piece of furniture is installed in your home--would you retain it?

You can--easily--by the simple O-Cedar treatment. A few drops of O-Cedar Polish on a cloth dampened with water, forms a soft soapy lather which cleans, polishes and beautifies--bringing out the blended beauty of the grain. After polishing with a dry cloth, rub your dry hand across the wood, and note how dry the surface is. That is the O-Cedar result--a hard lustre that will neither become gummy or sticky, nor collect the dust.

What O-Cedar Polish does for furniture, O-Cedar Polish Mop accomplishes on floors. The Polish, 25c. to $3.00 sizes. The Mop, round or triangle, $1.50. Both at any Groceries or Hardware Shop.
