NEW KINGSTON INDUSTRY

IT WILL BE OPERATED BY LOCAL CAPITAL.

It Is Said Disabled Soldiers Will Do the Work of Manufacturing Reed and Rattan Furniture.

A new industry is to be opened up shortly in Kingston, operated entirely by local capital. The company which is to operate it is known as "The Casualties" Reed and Rattan Company, Limited, and application has been made to the Ontario Government for a charter of incorporation to enable work to be started at once. The company is unique in the fact that its object is to supply the demand which exists for reed and rattan furniture and fancy goods, which are more popular now than ever before, and which are becoming more and more popular with passing years. The fact that so much of this work has been done by returned soldiers who are disabled or who have lost their lower limbs was the primary motive in forming the company to carry on this work on a commercial basis. Suitable premises have been secured in an extensive factory building being secured for the opening of the factory.

It is expected that sufficient employees can be secured from the ranks of disabled soldiers to produce a sufficient output to keep the factory working. The management will be conducted by expert workers in conjunction with the vocational training department of the soldiers' civil re-establishment department, and when fully trained, these men will be given permanent employment by the company as reed and rattan workers. All kinds of furniture and fancy goods of this material will be made, and will be the main activity of the company. It is proposed to carry on operations on a profit sharing basis, so that the employees will have the benefit of any profits that may accrue from the business. The men who have gone into the company have done so not with any hope of making dividends, but with the idea of assisting disabled soldiers to find lucrative, easy and congenial employment.

Already twenty Kingston men have subscribed to the company and have taken out one share each at a cost of one hundred dollars. They are Lt.-Col. A. B. Cunningham, Roney and Company, E. P. Jenkins, Major W. E. Walsh, W. J. Barrett, H. W. Shaw, Robert G. Richards, E. E. Newman, William Jackson, R. F. Elliott, W. T. Cohnell, Peter Richardson, F. P. Quinn, L. C. Lockett, L. M. Austin, Lieut. W. G. Bailey, W. F. and H. C. Nickle, R. J. Rodger, and Lt.-Col. H. E. Fense. Definite announcements of the date of commencing operations are expected in the near future.

turns when he thinks his father is in need. Then comes a unique and surprising climax when Buddy finds the hated Yartons in possession of his old home.—Advt.

"HIS BRIDAL NIGHT"

Played at Grand Before Large Audience Friday Night.
"His Bridal Night" was played before a very large and select audience at the Grand Opera House on Friday night, and seldom has anything been seen of such daintiness and gossamer-like substantiality. Even the interrogativeness of the fancy articles of feminine attire, that were projected into prominence caught the fancy of the beholders. The performance was thoroughly admirable and there was a fitting climax that was very pleasing.

The plot works out in natural sequence, rippling along from single to single, from complication to complication with a few moments of dullness which the author Margaret Mayo knew how to use in order to heighten effect. The play is devoid of anything crude. The tale carries mistaken identity to the point of distraction. A girl quarrels with her husband after the marriage ceremony. Her twin sister determines to teach her a lesson and goes upon the honeymoon completely disguised as the bridegroom. A love-sick swain, along with three husbands to the rear, and a blazé butler are all entangled in the resulting events.
"His Bridal Night" will be seen at the Grand Saturday matinee and evening.

IN MEMORIAM.

In sad but loving memory of my dear husband, George David Corkey, died of wounds, Sept. 26th, 1918, buried in Panbourg, D'Amiens, Military Cemetery, Arras.

He marched away so bravely, His young head proudly held, His footsteps never faltered, His courage never failed.

There on the field of battle, He calmly took his place, He fought and died for Britain, And the honour of his race.

Though he sleeps not in his native land, But nearby, Far from me who loved him dear, In a hero's grave he lies.

Friends may think I have forgotten him, When at times they see me smile, But they little know the sorrow, That smile hides all the while.

IN MEMORIAM.

In loving memory of our dear mother, Mrs. Mary McMen, who died one year ago today, September 25th, 1919.

"Peaceful be thy rest, dear mother, 'Tis sweet to breathe thy name, In life we loved you very dear, In death we do the same, Dearest mother, you've been absent, From our midst a year today, How we miss your loving presence, Aching hearts alone can say." —Children.

Theatrical

At the Grand.

For the first three days of next week the Grand presents for the approval of the amusement loving public one of the most select programs of the season. Miss Madge Kennedy, the beautiful Goldwyn artiste, will appear in a splendid photoplay, "The Perfect Lady," a delightful romance unfolded in five wonderful reels. "The Perfect Lady" is one of those distinctly different photoplays telling an interesting story with many thrills, surprises and unexpected situations arising throughout the sequences of its continuity. Peggy Hyland is in a five reel film, "A Rebellious Wife," a one reel Mutt and Jeff comedy, and an interesting scenic. Superior vaudeville will complete a fine programme.—Advt.

At Griffin's.

Again last evening Marguerite Clark scored another hit with a large audience when she was seen in "Come Out of the Kitchen," her charming new photoplay which has been attracting capacity houses at Griffin's during the last few days. Miss Clark's portrayal in this story has added to her popularity and is regarded as one of the finest impersonations in which she has been seen this season. Don't miss it. Another part of our programme which should not be overlooked is the vaudeville, which consists of Al Turner, a gifted Zepholonist in a delightful musical act, which wins much applause. Macker and Miller harmony singing and dancing and a comical cartoon, who amuses all present. See this bill to-night.—Advt.

At The Strand.

"Bill Apperson's Boy" in which Jack Pickford will be seen at the Strand Theatre, commencing Monday, takes one into the midst of one of the most curious peoples of the United States, the Blue Ridge mountaineers. Laid somewhere among the many ranges of this great group which stretch as far north as New York state, as far south as Alabama, and as far west as Kentucky, the picture gives an intimate idea of how the Blue Ridge folks live.

Buddy Apperson, who is portrayed by Mr. Pickford, is typical of those people who are said to be the purest descendants of English, Scotch and Scotch-Irish stock to be found anywhere in the United States, due to the fact that they have not mingled with other races here as have other immigrants.

In his devotion to the memory of his dead mother, his regard for his father, and his love for Martha Yartton, Buddy Apperson displays traits which win sympathy from the start. Angered over the appearance in his father's home of a step-mother, Buddy leaves. But before going out into parts unknown he cannot withstand the temptation to once more see Martha Yartton, his sweetheart.

As he is looking at her home in the darkness he sees a figure creeping toward it. Then the slinking shadow enters a window. Gun in hand Buddy follows. The other man hears him and escapes. Buddy is found by Martha and, a moment later, by her father. Yartton suspects Buddy stole into the house to see Martha and orders his arrest.

Martha defies her father to tell the truth on the witness stand, and Buddy is freed. But his troubles are not over for the neighborhood temporarily ostracizes Buddy and his father, and Martha says she thinks it is better that they not see each other again. So Buddy leaves and easy re-
