CHIEF NESBITT IS DEAD

HEAD OF POLICE FORCE PASSED AWAY WEDNESDAY MORNING

Had Been Connected With the Department For Over Forty Years—Served With Distinction, and Was Noted For Devotion to Duty.

Following an illness extending over a few months, the death occurred about 9.15 o'clock on Wednesday morning of Chief of Police Robert Nesbitt, at his home, 337 Johnson street, and in his passing the city loses a good citizen and a most loyal and devoted servant.

The late Robert Nesbitt was appointed chief of police in September, 1918, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of William Baillie, who passed away in June, 1918. During the long time he had served on the police force, he was for over twenty-five years engaged in the capacity of sergeant.

Decceased was widely known, and held in warm esteem by a wide circle of friends. "Bob" Nesbitt, as he was known to all his friends, was devoted to his duty and was always on the job. He was born in Ireland, and was seventy years of age.

He left Ireland when a young man, and joined the police force in Liverpool, and served there several years with distinction. It was there that he received his first training in police duty and serving on a force regarded as one of the best in the world, he got a grasp of police duty that well-fitted him for service on the local police force.

Coming to Canada, he located in Kingston, and joined the police force, and by his splendid service worked his way to the head of the department, and it is much to be regretted that he was no longer spared to serve in the capacity of chief.

He was beloved by everyone—even the poor unfortunates who happened to fall into the police nets, for "Bob" Nesbitt had a kind heart, and many a man of the down and out character, was given a helping hand from this veteran peace officer. He was well liked by every member of the force, and the news of his death was received with sincere regret by all.

While he had been in failing health for some time, he was able to be around from time to time, and the end came quite suddenly.

The late Chief Nesbitt was a Presbyterian, and a member of Cooke's church. He was also a member of St. John's Lodge, A. F. & A. M., and an Orangeman. He is survived by his wife, two sons, James W. groomer, corner of University avenue, and Johnson street, and Stanley, of this city, and three daughters, Misses Mamie and Mabel, both school teachers, and Miss Lila, at home.

It is a coincidence that Nicholas Timmerman, another veteran policeman of the force passed away just ten days ago. Sergeant Samuel Arnel, another old member of the police force died very suddenly last April.

At the Wednesday morning session of the police court, Magistrate Farrell referred to the death of Chief Nesbitt. He said he regretted very much the news of the death of the chief, who had been in poor health for some time, but whose death came suddenly at the end. He said that Chief Nesbitt had been a member of the police force for over forty years, and had a record of long and valuable service. He had always been noted for his devotion to duty, and in the performance of his duty on one occasion had been seriously wounded. In his association with him, he had always held him in very high esteem, and his death would be a distinct loss to the city.

Having discussed the matter of Organization somewhat fully, let us proceed to the second means by which the Farmer's Organization plans to attain its goal—"better rural conditions"—that of education.

We will not even pretend to be competent to do justice to this subject, but merely to point out some of the lines along which we as Canadians need education, and try to suggest some means of obtaining the needed education.

In the first place we are sadly in need of educating ourselves along the line of citizenship. Few of us ever stop to think of the privilege and attendant responsibility, and implied duty which is involved in that term.

We talk a great deal about personal liberty, and are justly indignant when what we conceive to be our liberties are interfered with but after all personal liberty is but one side of the question of citizenship. Theoretically at least, the state confers liberty upon all deserving citizens. The British flag is conceded to be the embodiment of justice and liberty.

The citizen's duty to the state is to see that these principles of justice and liberty are made practicable. In other words, each of us must consider ourselves as a factor of the nation—our business, whatever it may be, not as ours solely, but as a part of the nation's business, our individual vote as a voice in the nation's councils.

It is imperative, if we are to have liberty, that our people be taught the full import of their franchise, the individual importance of it. It is the epitome of the privilege of citizenship.

Scarcely a day passes but I hear people talking about this "ballot market." Only today I heard men who know mention the names of men who are supposedly reputable, but who are known to sell their vote. More than that I heard one man defend the practice by saying: "Isn't it mine just as any other property, and mayn't I sell it if I choose?" At this election time do not let us discuss what any person does or says, but let us discuss business; let us know what the issue before us is. And surely it is not: Shall Premier Hearst be returned to power? Shall Mr. Dewar be given the reins? Or even, shall these farmers be given a show?

Let the premier defend his course, show how his system has benefited the country, give us real statements as to what he has done, instead of telling us how terrible it would be if the "other fellow" got into power. Let Mr. Dewar tell, not what woeful mistakes the present government has made, but how he proposes to better things, not criticism and promises, but well laid practical lines upon which he will work to better conditions. Let the U.F.O. people give a reason for their existence, and emphasize how and why their political plans are worth attention.

I have heard new-hatched men say that these U. F. O. conventions are the only ones where national interests are discussed, where the people are made acquainted with government statistics showing our actual condition. These political gatherings should be educational primarily, and no man or woman can vote intelligently unless he or she knows two things at least.

1. What has been accomplished by the parliament which we elected four years ago? 2. Has its record entitled it to re-election? And then, regarding the ballot as the personal answer to these questions, vote as a responsible citizen. For the voting citizen is responsible for the government of the country, and he is responsible, because he shrinks his duty in voting without considering what voting means, the country is mis-governed. Every ignorant voter is a menace to the liberty of the land.

Rankin is utterly opposed to any party or clique that is professedly for the farmers in Frontenac and is united with the Socialism and Bolshevism in Toronto.
