

Columbia Records

Van and Schenck

Make Records Exclusively for Columbia—Here Are Some of Their Best

- Oh! How She Can Sing A-2757 . 90c
- In the Land o' Yame Yame . . . A-2521 . 90c
- Why Do They Call Them Babies . . . A-2674 . 90c

Other Good Records

Come in and Hear Them on the Columbia Grafonola

Let Us Demonstrate

any of these beautiful machines.

Treadgold Sporting Goods Co.

88 Princess St.

Kingston, Ont.

Agents for Kingston.

All classes of high yield investments—Corporation, Government and Municipal. Private wires—New York, Chicago, Montreal, Toronto.

STOCKS—GRAIN—COTTON

BONGARD, RYERSON & CO.

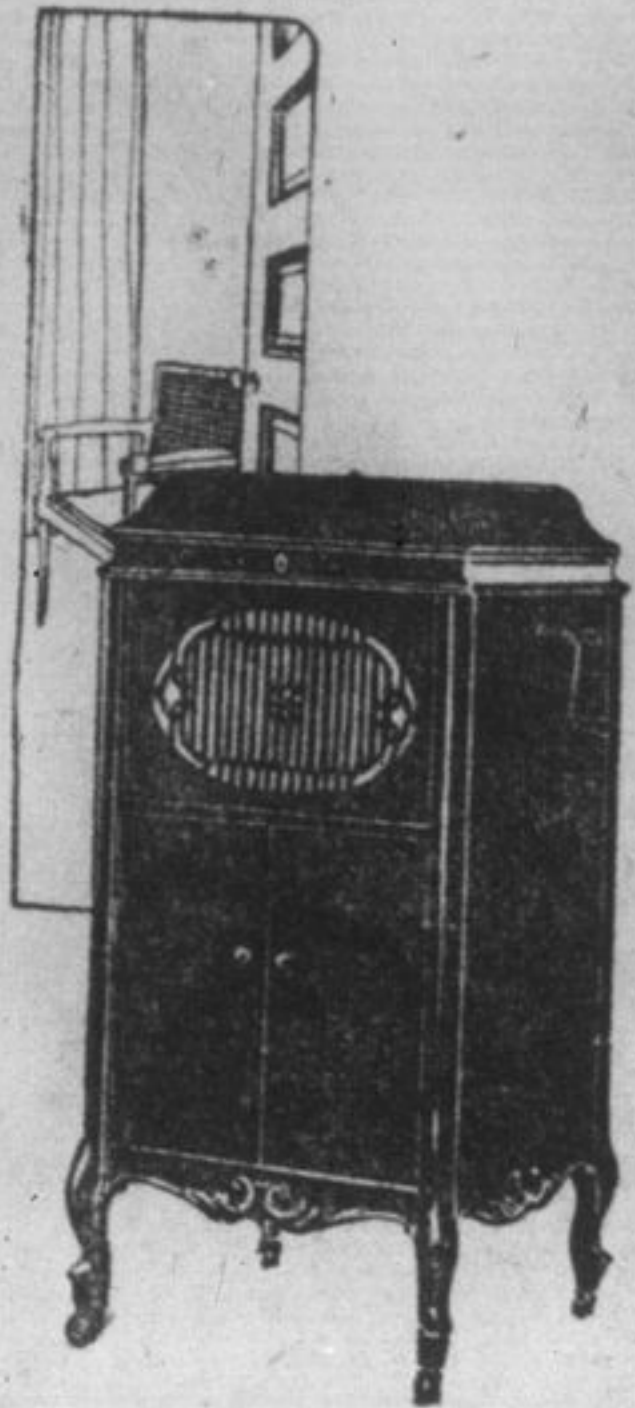

857 Bagot St. Phone 1735. H. J. Bongard, Manager

England's Speediest Horse.

"The chestnut is the best horse up to a mile we have ever seen," is the verdict of London Sporting Life on James White's Irish Elegance, by Sir Archibald—Sweet Clorane, after he won the Portland Plate at Doncaster with 142 pounds on his back. His weight in the Cambridgeshire is now 149 pounds, a 19-pound penalty having been incurred. Irish Elegance is Irish bred.

Brunswick Phonographs

Plays any Record BETTER than any other Phonograph

In the World of Sport

SHOW PRINCE OF WALES HOW HOCKEY IS PLAYED

St. Patrick's and Dentals Propose to Meet At Toronto Nov. 3rd.

It is proposed to stage a hockey match for the Prince of Wales at the Toronto Arena on Monday, November 3, and the Dentals and St. Patrick's last year's O.H.A. teams will be offered the privilege of playing their last year's teams for the edification of his Royal Highness, who has never seen a hockey game. The game will be under the auspices of the Sportsmen's Patriotic Association, and it is proposed that the receipts go to the Navy League of Canada, who are now opening a campaign for $500,000. Mayor Church is at present communicating with Vice-Admiral Halsey of the Prince's staff, and upon his decision will depend whether or not the game is staged.

A Track Surprise.

Joe Breen, the sensational running half of the champion 207th Battalion football fourteen of Ottawa in 1914, and who this year is Varsity's backfield "ace," gave Walter Knox, coach of the University of Toronto track team a pleasant surprise at the inter-faculty games held last week. Breen has been paying strict attention to football and has not been turning out with other candidates for the track team. Consequently Coach Knox had no line on the clever athlete's ability. In fact, it is doubtful if Knox knew there was such a person as Breen, but just the same this sturdy boy who thinks nothing of dashing through opposing football teams for 25 and 50 yard gains, or knocking out triples and home runs in baseball was an easy winner of the 100 yard and 220 sprints at today's games. Breen won the century in 19 3-5 eased up, and the 220 yard; in 23 1-5 in the same hollow fashion. Coach Knox is confident that Breen would have given the record 10 seconds for the hundred, and 23 for the 220 yards, established by Lou Seibert, a beating if he had been pressed. He looks like a sure winner in the sprints at the Intercollegiate games when they are held later in the fall.

France Outboxes England.

The Englishman of an earlier day could never have conceived the possibility of the immense strides boxing has made in France. The Englishman of the present day had an undeniable demonstration of it a few weeks ago, when Eugene Criqui, the bantam-weight champion of France, came across to London and knocked out Walter Ross of Glasgow, the bantam champion of England, in the fifteenth round. There was a stake of £400 a side in addition to the purse, the title and the London Belt. Each weighed a few ounces under the stipulated 118 pounds.

No Stock for Canada.

Every overseas mail brings advice of the sale of good horses to go to India, Australia or other parts of the Empire. No new stock comes to Canada, nor ever will until racing is resumed and placed on a basis of permanence.

Consider the greater comfort, convenience, economy of the AutoStrop Razor! How small the price of $5.00 looks in comparison! Stropping—shaving—cleaning—the blade remains in razor.

Razor—strop—12 blades—$5

AutoStrop SAFETY RAZOR

BOBBY KERR HAS CAUGHT THE "FEVER"

This being a year of come-backs, and such names as Pat Moran and Bob Isbister glistening in the limelight, the fever is catching, and now Bobby Kerr is a victim. He has announced that he is going to be a candidate for the Canadian Olympic team next summer. Bob stepped the hundred in close to 10 in England last Spring with no training, and he feels that he can still do it in 10, which means that he will keep Ponton, Green, Johnson and the others busy trying to avoid his dust. Series of the great sprinters of the past showed their best form when they were Kerr's age, for, he is remembered, Robert is far from being old, as athletes go. Next thing we can look for is Billy Sherring training for the Marathon.

OFFICIAL CHALLENGE.

Dates Named for Race for America's Cup.

Conditions under which the Royal Ulster Yacht Club, which recently challenged in behalf of Sir Thomas Lipton, to race for the America's Cup, were set forth in a cablegram made public by Geo. Cormack, secretary of the New York Yacht Club. In part, the cablegram reads: "We challenge to sail a series of matches for the America's Cup with the yacht Shamrock IV, against any one yacht built in the United States of America. First race to be sailed June 24th, 1920; second race Saturday, June 26; third race Tuesday, June 29. For further races, if any, to be sailed on each following Tuesday and Saturday.

The cablegram further says that the race shall be sailed according to the conditions made for races given in 1914, in which the Shamrock IV was to have taken part. No decision in reference to the challenge has yet been made by members of the New York Yacht Club, but it is expected that the challenge will be accepted.

Cricket Still the Game.

Old-time supporters of England's national game, now that it has enjoyed a most satisfactory season under after-war conditions, are congratulating themselves on the demonstration that the game, played as it was accustomed to be played, has not lost its grip on the British public. It has not been necessary to resort to any new-fangled notions put forward with much earnestness, and an honest desire to benefit the game. "There is not any need for change," concludes one authority. "A case has not been made out to heighten the excitement necessary to resort to any device to reduce the width of the bat, have balls to the over, or fix the length of time that each side shall bat, the team making the largest number of runs to win. These are some of the suggestions that have been seriously advanced to quicken interest in this essentially British pastime, but in the manner in which crowds have flocked to the majority of the grounds to watch the matches in the championship contest shows that the game to all right, and that so far from its popularity being in any danger of being lessened by the public's turning, it has appreciably increased."

Athletics Boom in Belgium. According to the Athletic Director of the Y.M.C.A. with the Belgian army, a remarkable revival of sports is taking place throughout Belgium. There is a striking absence of professionalism, and the Belgian Sports Federation makes a strong point of sport for its own sake. Wrestling and boxing are popular, and both officers and men are taking lessons at every opportunity.

TO SOON ABOLISH FREAK PITCHING

During the recent world's baseball series Barney Dreyfuss, who is the president and owner of the Pittsburgh National league club, declared to numerous baseball men of influence that the time for abolishing all kinds of freak pitching had arrived. He stated that he intended to begin a vigorous crusade in the National league between now and next season and that he hoped the American league also would fall into line.

"Rules should be adopted by both major leagues making the pitchers depend entirely on natural skill," said Dreyfuss. "There should be no further delay in putting a stop to the use of the spitter, the shine ball and other unfair deliveries. I favor legislation prohibiting the application of any foreign substance to the cover of the ball. A pitcher should not be allowed to thrust his fingers into his hip pocket, rub the ball on any part of his uniform or raise it to his mouth.

"Pitchers who come into the big leagues equipped with natural skill are at a disadvantage. They are frequently beaten by rival boxmen, who use saliva or something else. Very few men have been able to master the shine ball, but this is an evil that is bound to become universal in due time.

"I've heard that some of the most successful pitchers have been rubbing the ball with emery paper concealed in their gloves or carried by one of the infielders. Trickery of this kind is unsportsmanlike and it is going to hurt baseball if it isn't checked by the rule makers.

One of the American league's umpires who has made a study of freak pitching said the other day that the evil could be gradually wiped out by compelling all pitchers entering fast company for the first time to depend on natural skill exclusively. In the course of time, this umpire argued, the pitchers who are now employing unfair methods, would drop out of the big leagues and would carry their fraid deliveries with them. It would be a downright hardship to deprive a pitcher of methods without which he could not earn his salary, the umpire added.

Cricket Still the Game.

Old-time supporters of England's national game, now that it has enjoyed a most satisfactory season under after-war conditions, are congratulating themselves on the demonstration that the game, played as it was accustomed to be played, has not lost its grip on the British public. It has not been necessary to resort to any new-fangled notions put forward with much earnestness, and an honest desire to benefit the game. "There is not any need for change," concludes one authority. "A case has not been made out to heighten the excitement necessary to resort to any device to reduce the width of the bat, have balls to the over, or fix the length of time that each side shall bat, the team making the largest number of runs to win. These are some of the suggestions that have been seriously advanced to quicken interest in this essentially British pastime, but in the manner in which crowds have flocked to the majority of the grounds to watch the matches in the championship contest shows that the game to all right, and that so far from its popularity being in any danger of being lessened by the public's turning, it has appreciably increased."

Cricket Still the Game.

Old-time supporters of England's national game, now that it has enjoyed a most satisfactory season under after-war conditions, are congratulating themselves on the demonstration that the game, played as it was accustomed to be played, has not lost its grip on the British public. It has not been necessary to resort to any new-fangled notions put forward with much earnestness, and an honest desire to benefit the game. "There is not any need for change," concludes one authority. "A case has not been made out to heighten the excitement necessary to resort to any device to reduce the width of the bat, have balls to the over, or fix the length of time that each side shall bat, the team making the largest number of runs to win. These are some of the suggestions that have been seriously advanced to quicken interest in this essentially British pastime, but in the manner in which crowds have flocked to the majority of the grounds to watch the matches in the championship contest shows that the game to all right, and that so far from its popularity being in any danger of being lessened by the public's turning, it has appreciably increased."

Cricket Still the Game.

Old-time supporters of England's national game, now that it has enjoyed a most satisfactory season under after-war conditions, are congratulating themselves on the demonstration that the game, played as it was accustomed to be played, has not lost its grip on the British public. It has not been necessary to resort to any new-fangled notions put forward with much earnestness, and an honest desire to benefit the game. "There is not any need for change," concludes one authority. "A case has not been made out to heighten the excitement necessary to resort to any device to reduce the width of the bat, have balls to the over, or fix the length of time that each side shall bat, the team making the largest number of runs to win. These are some of the suggestions that have been seriously advanced to quicken interest in this essentially British pastime, but in the manner in which crowds have flocked to the majority of the grounds to watch the matches in the championship contest shows that the game to all right, and that so far from its popularity being in any danger of being lessened by the public's turning, it has appreciably increased."

Cricket Still the Game.

Old-time supporters of England's national game, now that it has enjoyed a most satisfactory season under after-war conditions, are congratulating themselves on the demonstration that the game, played as it was accustomed to be played, has not lost its grip on the British public. It has not been necessary to resort to any new-fangled notions put forward with much earnestness, and an honest desire to benefit the game. "There is not any need for change," concludes one authority. "A case has not been made out to heighten the excitement necessary to resort to any device to reduce the width of the bat, have balls to the over, or fix the length of time that each side shall bat, the team making the largest number of runs to win. These are some of the suggestions that have been seriously advanced to quicken interest in this essentially British pastime, but in the manner in which crowds have flocked to the majority of the grounds to watch the matches in the championship contest shows that the game to all right, and that so far from its popularity being in any danger of being lessened by the public's turning, it has appreciably increased."

Cricket Still the Game.

Old-time supporters of England's national game, now that it has enjoyed a most satisfactory season under after-war conditions, are congratulating themselves on the demonstration that the game, played as it was accustomed to be played, has not lost its grip on the British public. It has not been necessary to resort to any new-fangled notions put forward with much earnestness, and an honest desire to benefit the game. "There is not any need for change," concludes one authority. "A case has not been made out to heighten the excitement necessary to resort to any device to reduce the width of the bat, have balls to the over, or fix the length of time that each side shall bat, the team making the largest number of runs to win. These are some of the suggestions that have been seriously advanced to quicken interest in this essentially British pastime, but in the manner in which crowds have flocked to the majority of the grounds to watch the matches in the championship contest shows that the game to all right, and that so far from its popularity being in any danger of being lessened by the public's turning, it has appreciably increased."

Cricket Still the Game.

Old-time supporters of England's national game, now that it has enjoyed a most satisfactory season under after-war conditions, are congratulating themselves on the demonstration that the game, played as it was accustomed to be played, has not lost its grip on the British public. It has not been necessary to resort to any new-fangled notions put forward with much earnestness, and an honest desire to benefit the game. "There is not any need for change," concludes one authority. "A case has not been made out to heighten the excitement necessary to resort to any device to reduce the width of the bat, have balls to the over, or fix the length of time that each side shall bat, the team making the largest number of runs to win. These are some of the suggestions that have been seriously advanced to quicken interest in this essentially British pastime, but in the manner in which crowds have flocked to the majority of the grounds to watch the matches in the championship contest shows that the game to all right, and that so far from its popularity being in any danger of being lessened by the public's turning, it has appreciably increased."

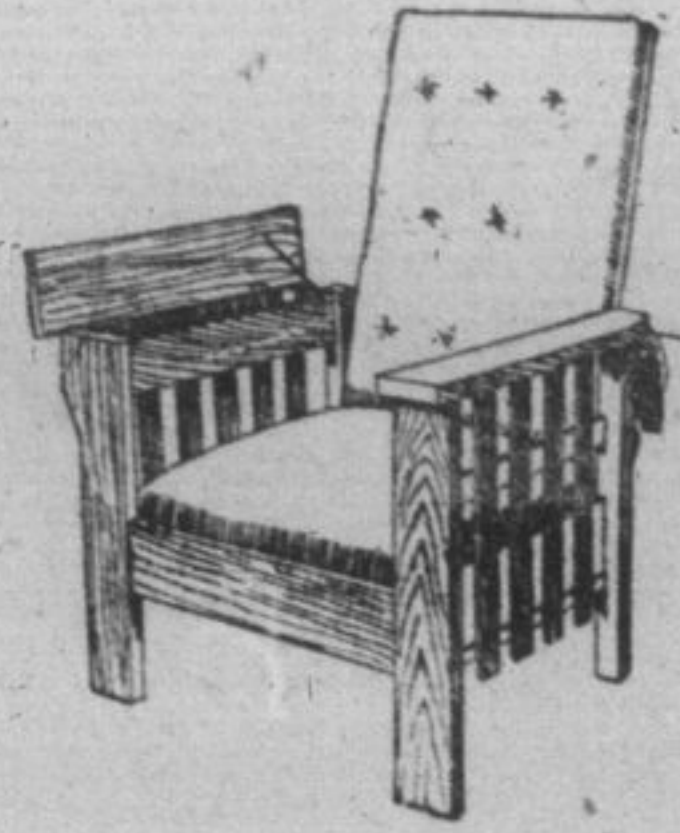

Cricket Still the Game.

Old-time supporters of England's national game, now that it has enjoyed a most satisfactory season under after-war conditions, are congratulating themselves on the demonstration that the game, played as it was accustomed to be played, has not lost its grip on the British public. It has not been necessary to resort to any new-fangled notions put forward with much earnestness, and an honest desire to benefit the game. "There is not any need for change," concludes one authority. "A case has not been made out to heighten the excitement necessary to resort to any device to reduce the width of the bat, have balls to the over, or fix the length of time that each side shall bat, the team making the largest number of runs to win. These are some of the suggestions that have been seriously advanced to quicken interest in this essentially British pastime, but in the manner in which crowds have flocked to the majority of the grounds to watch the matches in the championship contest shows that the game to all right, and that so far from its popularity being in any danger of being lessened by the public's turning, it has appreciably increased."

Cricket Still the Game.

Old-time supporters of England's national game, now that it has enjoyed a most satisfactory season under after-war conditions, are congratulating themselves on the demonstration that the game, played as it was accustomed to be played, has not lost its grip on the British public. It has not been necessary to resort to any new-fangled notions put forward with much earnestness, and an honest desire to benefit the game. "There is not any need for change," concludes one authority. "A case has not been made out to heighten the excitement necessary to resort to any device to reduce the width of the bat, have balls to the over, or fix the length of time that each side shall bat, the team making the largest number of runs to win. These are some of the suggestions that have been seriously advanced to quicken interest in this essentially British pastime, but in the manner in which crowds have flocked to the majority of the grounds to watch the matches in the championship contest shows that the game to all right, and that so far from its popularity being in any danger of being lessened by the public's turning, it has appreciably increased."

LIVING ROOM FURNITURE

EASY CHAIRS, RATTAN CHAIRS, ROCKERS—FUMED OAK FINISH—UPHOLSTERED IN TAPESTRY.

LIBRARY TABLES, PERIOD DESIGNS—ALL LATEST STYLES.

R. J. Reid

LEADING UNDERTAKER PHONE 577

Established 1870

TWEDDELL'S

For all new style, good wearing

Suits $20 up to $45

All Prices Between

Now Is The Time

to have your Furnace and Stoves looked after. We have only experienced mechanics and if you require any work in this line we can give you satisfaction.

Agents for the celebrated Hecla Hot Air Furnace.

Lemmon & Sons

PHONE 840 187 Princess Street

EASTERN HATS & CAPS FOR DAD AND HIS LAD

Cicotte's Victory Was Anticipated.

Cicotte had been nursing a lame arm for two weeks prior to the opening of the world's baseball series. He was lacking in control, his most valuable asset, and was batted heavily in the first game. He came back in the fourth combat and pitched great ball, but was beaten by Ring, 2 to 0. On that occasion Cicotte held the Reds to five hits, but made two fatal errors that were responsible for both of their runs.

A winning performance in the seventh game by Cicotte, therefore, was generally anticipated, inasmuch as it was a foregone conclusion that he would show his best skill. Cicotte made good, too, by limiting the Reds' attack to one run and seven hits, the Sox winning by a score of 4 to 1.

Tex Rickard has the signature of Jimmy Wilde to box a suitable opponent before the International Sporting Club of New York in February, and not to enter in any other salubrious east of Chicago before that date. Wilde, who will sail for the United States on October 18th, will doubtless do some exhibition work in the interim while visiting the points of interest in America.

WILSON'S "The National Smoke"

BACHELOR

Still The Most For The Money

10c.

ANDREW WILSON & CO. TORONTO AND MONTREAL

WHY WASTE TIME ON PAST PERFORMANCES?

By Bud Fisher

JEFF, HOW'D YOU LIKE TO EDGE INTO ROYAL SOCIETY BY MEETING A KING? NOT KING GEORGE, BUT KING MANUEL OF PORTUGAL. I'LL INTRODUCE YOU TO HIM IF YOU WANT ME TO.

DO I? SAY!! THEN MAYBE MANUEL WILL INTRODUCE ME TO GEORGE!

MANUEL, MEET MY LITTLE FRIEND JEFF. JEFF, MEET MY FRIEND MANUEL.

SUFFOCATED WITH JOY TO MEET YOU, KING!

CHARMED!

WAITER, ONE QUART OF THE RAREST WINE YOU HAVE IN THE CELLAR, AND IT MUST BE COLD. THAT WILL BE ALL FOR THE PRESENT... SO YOU'RE A KING!!! A REAL KING!!!

NO! I'M AN EX-KING!

EX-KING!

HEY, WAITER! CANCEL THAT WINE ORDER AND BRING US TWO BEERS!