"DESPERADO" A MERE BOY.

17-Year-Old Naval Lad Did Some Hold-up Work.

New York, Oct. 25.—A 17 year old boy in the uniform of the United States Navy, who was caught with a kept notebook in the West Side Police Court yesterday. Then he told the judge how on fifteen different occasions enumerated therein since October 5 he had held up persons in Central Park at the point of a little 22 caliber revolver.

Of his victims—eleven men and four women—the only one who had inspired him with fear, he said, was a young lady who drew a hatpin and pursued him in a desperate half-mile chase among the trees and shrubs. His "gross earnings" in the "hold-up business" totaled no more than $23.25 and "the 25 cents was a war savings stamp."

The magistrate pronounced the case the most astonishing he had ever heard, and informed the youth, Charles Almondinger, that he looked more like a church choir boy than a highwayman. The boy blamed his downfall to the fact that he had been brought up in an orphan asylum.

Half a score of detectives have been searching Central Park for the footpads who have been holding up people there since the "hold-up" since October 5. It was learned when Almondinger was brought into court. Comparison of his notebook with the police records showed that "he was the robber."

A few months ago he came back from France, and later received 60 days short leave, which time he said he devoted to learning the art of highway robbery. He was held for a further hearing.
