The Canadian V.C.'s

How Men From Canada Earned the Empire's Highest Tribute for Bravery in the Field of Battle.

CANADA'S V. C. HEROES—Nov 1st For most conspicuous bravery and self-sacrifice on the 11th October, 1918, northeast of Cambrai, when with attacking troops which came under heavy enfilade machine-gun fire from a neighboring village.

Rushing forward with nine volunteers he shot the crew of the enemy machine-gun and turning it on the enemy, enabled his party to reach the village. He then rushed another machine-gun, killed the crew, captured an officer and ten enemy and thereby cleared their end of the village.

Lieut. Algie, having established his party, went back for reinforcements, but was killed when leading them forward. His valor and personal initiative in the face of intense fire, saved many lives and enabled the position to be held.

gun on him, pouring the shot directly across his chest and heart. He fell killed instantly.

The Canadian leader gone, the Boche counter-attacked. Four enemy tanks bore down on the remnant of the 20th, which fought heroically and were able to hold the posts already established, until the 27th Battalion advancing on the left, occupied the village and relieved the situation.

About three o'clock in the afternoon the body of Lieut. Algie was found lying across the village street in front of the house from which the enemy had directed the fire upon him. They hurried him back and buried him, in his service uniform, in a soldier's grave. The Victoria Cross was awarded posthumously for his heroism in face of intense fire and for his gallantry in protecting the lives of the men serving with him.

Wallace Lloyd Algie, only son of James Algie, M.D., Toronto, was born at Alton, Ont., 1891. His father is of Canadian Scottish descent; his mother was a native of Devonshire Eng. Before enlistment Mr. Algie was in the service of the Bank of Toronto in Vancouver and later in Toronto. When he was able to do so he played in the 43rd Highlanders band. Early in the war he took an officer's course and graduated as lieutenant but on seeing that his services were not required in that capacity at the time, he enlisted as a private in April, 1916. He was granted his commission overseas in the 20th Battalion.

As a boy, tales of heroism and military exploits, especially stories of Clavhouse and British heroes of the Indian Mutiny and Crimean war, had great interest for Wallace Lloyd Algie, and on one of his leaves overseas he visited the ancestral home of the Algies in Scotland and viewed the monument at the Cross of Paisley raised to the memory of James Algie and Thomas Park, of Covenanter fame and dating back to Bothwell Bridge.

DISLIKES BADGE OF BEAUTY

Modern Man Apparently Not Reconciled to That Idea of His Projecting "Adam's Apple."

Man's badge of beauty and brains is his Adam's apple, that projection in the fore part of the neck which has been so called, from the notion that it was caused by a bit of the forbidden fruit which stuck in Adam's throat.

Scientists have many theories on the subject, and have told a long story of the evolution of the apple—how man came by long descent from ill-formed, spineless things that came into life by chemical action. Then came fish, which, as soon as they got backbones, began to develop something like Adam's apples. From the primitive forms of the ancient seas are believed to have come the mammals from which sprang the human race.

It is a long story, but the fact remains that as the human race developed and became more civilized the Adam's apple in man became more prominent. The ancient Greeks depicted their strong heroes and highest types of beauty with prominent "apples," although modern artists and sculptors rather ignore it in their works. As a matter of fact, the wearing of high stocks and collars would seem to point to the fact that man is not altogether proud of displaying his badge of beauty.

Two Sides of Japan.

A remarkable difference exists between the climates of western and central Japan, so much so that these districts are distinguished by the names of Snnindo—shady side—and Sanyodo—sunny side, respectively. During the long and rigorous winter of western Japan the central province, bordering on the inland sea, enjoys dry and comparatively mild weather. The two regions and the factors determining their climatic conditions are distinct. A Japanese writer says that while the winter climate of central and southern Japan depends on the southwestern monsoons, that of the western coast is directly related to the barometric area of north China.

canal towards Valenciennes, pursued by the British forces. The banks of the canal were heavily wooded and the advance of the Canadians along the eastern shore was stiffly contested.

The second division Canadians passed over the left of Naves during Oct. 10. About three miles north of this village an old sugar refinery, strongly garrisoned, took heavy toll of the passing troops. The Canadians reached a point several miles further on, but at midnight, having been relieved on the night by Imperial troops, they returned to the position near the sugar refinery.

Early on the morning of the 11th orders came through that the 20th Battalion was to attack Iwuy at 9 o'clock. While the Canadians were waiting the hour of attack the Germans poured a heavy enfilade fire on the lines and many men were killed before leaving the trenches.

The enemy had seized all positions of advantage around Iwuy. The embankment of a railway running into the town was garrisoned by machine gunners. On the outskirts of the village a group of houses near the railway provided additional cover for the gunners, and another group of houses on the right were garrisoned strongly. Heavy enfilade fire was being directed on the advancing companies of the 20th.

Lieut. Algie was in command of "B" company. At the east end of the village he saw the enemy bringing up more guns to completely enfilade the Canadian position. He collected nine volunteers and charged the gun posts, shot the crew of one enemy machine-gun and turned the gun around on the enemy. This action permitted his men to cross the railway embankment into the eastern part of the village. Lieut. Algie then rushed another machine-gun, killed the crew and cut off an officer and ten men, who surrendered to the Canadian. He then turned the guns on the enemy and cleared that part of the village.

Having established his men in the village and shown them how to use the enemy machine-guns, Lieut. Algie went back to the position for reinforcements, returning to the attack in a short time. Running ahead of his men, he advanced towards another group of houses on the right of the position already taken. The German gunners in one of the houses watched the Canadian officer coming and waited until he was quite near, then turned the whole force of the

ENO'S FRUIT SALT

HEALTH-GIVING

THE ANNOYANCE CAUSED BY SUBSTITUTES!

OVERWHELMING evidence from all over Canada proved how acutely the war shortage of Eno's Fruit Salt was felt by the general public. It is doubtful if the shortage in supplies of any other proprietary article ever has caused such inconvenience and genuine disappointment—amounting almost to irritation—as did the war-time famine in Eno's Fruit Salt.

The Canadian supply was reduced to almost nothing. Druggists were helpless, but in an honest endeavor to satisfy their customers sometimes suggested supposedly similar products. Unfortunate and annoying as this proved to both buyer and seller it undoubtedly served to establish more firmly than ever in the public mind their preference for ENO'S.

Don't be put off with imitations of Eno's Fruit Salt! You know you cheat yourself when you accept them.

Obituary testimony will not be taken as conclusive evidence with St. Peter. Be a "five one" in the village and town. What is termed a capital fellow may be handicapped for want of capital. The duke is never in danger of being ducal. Experience often causes us to surrender some of our highly cherished ideas. A debt of dishonor is mighty hard to settle.
