Combing Won't Rid Hair of Dandruff

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

Do this tonight, and by morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop at once, and your hair will be fluffy, lustreous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and never fails to do the work.

IN DAINTY COLOR

Little Things That Add So Much to Effectiveness.

Costumes Cannot Be Considered Complete Without Smart Accessories to Set Them Off.

The charm of many fashions is emphasized by the smart accessories that accompany them. Dresses of simple design are stamped outstare by a novelty of color, or perhaps a gay circle offers itself for smart trimming. Frocks that seem have a clever way of opening over dainty tucked vests and lace waistcoats to show their ruffled faces to the world.

Striking sashes are featured, and there is a bright allied girdle that forms a distinctive accompaniment to a white linen frock. It is of corded silk, six inches wide and striped with the allied colors artistically blended. Heavy red or blue silk tassels terminate this stunning sash.

Crisp organdie in delicate or pastel tints lends colorful beauty to many a simple dress. At present there is a vogue for plain white organdie sashes that suggest the quaint charm of the Dutch peasant's costume. These white sashes are usually part of a set consisting of dainty collar and cuffs hemmed with a half-inch border. They are unusually effective on checked or striped voile or fine gingham gowns.

A new note might be introduced in an old frock by an organdie sash of contrasting color, such as jade green with a white frock or sea-shell pink organdie expressing exquisite daintiness on a frock of pale ciel mil.

The sense of being fashionably and tastefully attired comes with wearing an embroidered satin sash on an afternoon gown of soft mulberry georgette. A splash of gay worsted embroidery in a conventional flower design traced itself over the center of the satin sash and crude wooden beads in bright colors weighted the ends.

For the matron with the black net gown there is a heavy jet rope girdle that glitters and twinkles delightfully when coiled about the hips.

Wonderfully exquisite are the new sashes that the younger set have adopted for evening and dance wear. The finest of the metal brocaded ribbons are traced with gold and silver thread on delicate backgrounds of orchid, lettuce green, peach, apricot, lemon, flesh and sky blue. The broad ribbon is drawn about the waist in a crushed girdle and allowed to fall in a graceful panel at the back. Soft silk fringe in a harmonizing tone borders the bottom.

A lace frock or a lovely taffeta or georgette dance frock would be popular at the many social affairs, if favored with one of these exquisitely dainty panel sashes.

USE FOR OLD HAIR RIBBON

When Freshness is Lost It Can Be Made Serviceable as Covering for Coat Hanger.

When the freshness of the hair ribbons has vanished so that it is quite impossible to make them stand up properly on the child's head, they may be used to good advantage for covering coat hangers of the ordinary wire or wooden variety. The ribbons should be dipped in gasoline, rubbed with clean, soft cloths until perfectly clean, and then pressed with a warm iron on the wrong side. The hangers should be pegged, first with a soft foundation material, and it will be found that the hair ribbons of usual width will do nicely to cover them. Little sachet bags, attached on baby ribbons, make a dainty finishing touch to the hangers.

BERESFORD ANECDOTES.

Popular British Admiral Had a Ready Wit.

Once in 1911 or 1912 when Lord Beresford was on full pay, and had, therefore, to keep a stopper on his tongue, he dropped anchor in the Mersey, where his flagship was boarded by three newspaper correspondents, the first to salute the quarter-deck being one from the London Daily Express. The admiral, having heartily received them, said: "This gentleman, is not a feet; it is a squadron of battleships without cruisers or destroyers. Please note the fact." A few days later a letter was received by the editor of the Daily Express, which read: "My Lords of the Admiralty have asked me why I gave an interview contrary to King's regulations. I said I did not give an interview. I saw three correspondents on my quarter-deck, and I made a speech to them. Will you, therefore, kindly write and say that your correspondent did not interview me, because I don't want the Admiralty to have one on me?" And the editor replied: "Dear Lord Charles: If you were the last admiral of the British navy I might stultify myself to the extent of white lie, but as there are others, I fear you will have to 'ace your own word' with the Lords of the Admiralty." Next day the editor received this note: "Thanks, Am telling them to go to hell—Beresford."

The many breezy anecdotes of Lord Beresford best describe the sort of man he was. One of his best phrases was, "I can sleep on a clothesline." Of all his sayings none is so famous as his telegram to King Edward refusing an invitation: "Sorry, can't come. Lif follows by post." "Admirable speech," said a famous politician to him after a meeting. "I didn't think you could do it. You don't look like a statesman." "Perhaps not," was the reply. "No more do you look like a weathercock."

Even the man who is unable to keep a horse may afford a nightmare. A good fountain pen is an ink convenience.

GHOST HANDS.

Strange Traditions That Are Widely Believed.

Hands, from the days of Daniel—when writings appeared so mysteriously on the walls of Belshazzar's palace—have always been connected with the occult, and were regarded by Chaldeans and Egyptians alike to be omens of the very greatest moment and significance.

The model of a hand, for example, was always carried in the festivals of Isis at the end of a palm branch, and hands figures frequently in the writings on the pyramids and statues, both in Egypt and Mesopotamia.

A certain branch of the Douglas family used to see the shadow of a mailed hand always before the death of one of the clan; whilst a branch of the MacDonnells will hear bones of the MacDonnells rattling on the floor invariable before a similar occurrence.

Some years ago a gentleman wrote to me from Torquay apropos of one of my ghost books and informed me that, waking up one night, he had put his hand out of bed to feel it immediately taken hold of by a hand of icy coldness. The following morning, he added, he saw the hands of the dead.

Later on he wrote me: "I had had another experience with the hand," he said, "but this time of a more startling order, as it took hold of me much more emphatically and seemed very reluctant to let go, I wonder what it means."

I had my idea, but did not tell him. And I was right, for I learned soon afterwards he had died. The hand this time had predicted his own death.

The family of Tulloch Gormas was haunted by the ghost of a girl with a dreadful hairy hand that she used to point at any member of the clan that was soon destined to die; whilst the Kincaidines had the spectre with the blood-stained hand which used to—and still does—haunt Glenmore.

It was formerly very aggressive, and in 1669 met and challenged three brothers successively to a duel—each of the brothers dying immediately afterwards, but latterly it has been much more docile and has contented itself with merely waving its blood-red hand—a sure signal however, of an approaching death or some other kind of disaster.

In Germany phantom hands would appear to be even commoner, for nearly all the old families have at one time or another, come under the spell or ban of mailed fingers.

There is—or was before the war—an inn in Saxony that was once a private house, and which was haunted by a huge hand that used to descend at night from the ceiling and impart to whoever was present all the sensations of strangulation.

According to tradition, a certain countess, who originally owned the house, got rid of her infirm husband by having him strangled there by an idiot of monstrous size, and as a punishment for the crime, her family and house were ever after haunted by a hand; inconceivably huge and hideous and cruel.

British Goods for Germans.

British goods to the value of $50,000,000 are in Cologne ready for sale to the Germans. The goods belong to members of the British Chamber of Commerce in Cologne.

Charles Knott, president of the chamber, has made an arrangement with Mathias Eraberger, German Minister of Finance and Hermann Mueller, the Foreign Minister, to prevent "dumping." Mr. Knott announced that both the German officials agreed to his suggestion that a clearing house should be opened in Berlin to control markets and exports so as to prevent "dumping."

"No exports from Germany will be made," said Mr. Knott, "unless offers are made by exporting firms to British firms and accepted by them, corresponding value of goods from Great Britain being accepted for the German market."
