SHOW LIVING MICROBES.

In Manuscripts Dating Before the Age of Printing.

Paris, Nov. 3. Eternal youth seems to have been accorded in full measure to some microbes. Before the Academy of Science yesterday, Professor Delage read a paper reporting discoveries by Dr. Gallipe, who is credited with finding in century-old paper organisms still living. According to this report, these organisms resisted 21 2/3 degrees Fahrenheit. "Time no more than heat seems to have had effect on these little organisms," said Professor Delage. "They are capable of cultivation and of movement. More than that, Dr. Gallipe has found in fragments of paper of Chinese manuscript, dating before the age of printing, micro-organisms still living and able to move, and that multiplied under suitable methods of culture."
