COOKE'S MEMORIAL TABLET

TO FOURTEEN SOLDIER MEMBERS WHO DIED DURING WAR

The Tablet Was Unveiled Sunday Evening By Mayor Newman — Sermon By Lieut.-Col. Alexander Gordon.

Following an eloquent speech, in which he paid tribute to the men who had paid the supreme sacrifice during the Great War, and called upon those left behind to maintain the high ideals for which they had died, Mayor H. W. Newman unveiled a memorial tablet in Cooke's church on Sunday evening, in honor of fourteen men of the congregation who lost their lives during the war. The church was crowded, and the service was conducted by Lieut.-Col. A. M. Gordon, D.D. Dr. Gordon chose as his text: "Whoever shall save his life shall lose it, and whoever shall lose his life for my sake and for the Gospel shall save it." In an inspiring address, he said:

The words of this text present the greatest paradox of the Lord's teaching. During the war the full significance of these words was realized in a way which had never before been understood. The lives of thousands of men have been given up in order that freedom might be secured, and for the protection of their homes and their loved ones. Was the sacrifice worth while? To many the conditions following the conclusion of the war have been disappointing. The people of the empire were eager for peace. They were even willing to fight that peace might be secured. The people had hoped that the new spirit of brotherhood might be the result of the war, but a full measure of peace could not be brought about at one stroke. The spirit of universal brotherhood has not yet come, and there is widespread unrest and industrial war. The reaction after so colossal a struggle was bound to bring about such conditions, and it is too much to expect that the world can settle down instantly to ways of peace. The war was fought that those who were not strong enough to fight for themselves could secure justice, and it was no wonder that some classes which had not been given justice in the past are now striving to secure it.

To many people the results of the war may seem disappointing. But we would probably never realize just how much we owe to those who have fallen. We should consider what would have happened had the enemy won, and on many occasions the enemy almost did win the war. We know of the fate of Belgium and of Serbia, and had the Germans won the war, the worst of their horrors would have been reserved for the British Empire had they won. The fate of the Empire would have been worse than death, and the world would have been put back centuries. But the men who had fallen stepped into the breach and saved us from that. When we remember that, we may realize just how much we owe to them.

The world has been in a state of chaos, and this gives an opportunity to the men left behind to work to bring about better conditions. The fact that they have this opportunity is due to the men who fought and died to save them from evils worse than death. During the engagement of the war they thought nothing of themselves. Their only concern, even when mortally wounded, was the success of the attack. Now that the war has been won and liberty assured, we can be certain that if those who died could see, and perhaps they can see, the victory that has been ours they would feel that they have not died in vain. The result they had striven for has been attained, and attained at the cost of their lives.

There was little of the joy of battle during the war. As I liked the fighting, a few liked it, but the majority neither liked nor hated it, but carried on and endured because they were determined not to give up. Faults amongst them were lightly esteemed and sins easily forgiven, but the one sin that was not overlooked was that of shirking. Now many of these men are gone, and the world is vastly poorer, but the Empire and world is also incalculably richer because of their inspiring example, their splendid memory and their undying influence. This memory should lead us to do better things and to urge us to carry on their work. Concerning those whom we commemorate on this occasion, although they have lost their lives, they have maintained their self-respect, their good name, their undying influence and esteem. At the front the truth of the words of the text was brought home, and there was the assurance that these men would hear the master's welcome. "Well done, good and faithful servant."

By God's mercy we are alive today, and we are not called upon to lay down our lives for the cause, but there is a call to every man to live for Christ. If we are to truly honor the dead, we must live and work for the things for which they fought, and so still remain united with them in communion with Christ. The aim for us is to work for the fulfillment of the prayer, "Thy Kingdom come. Thy will be done on earth, as it is in heaven."

During the service the choir rendered appropriate music. Lieut.-Col. J. Galloway sang "In Flanders Fields" (J. Deane Wells), and the choir sang the anthem, "Who are These in Bright Array," (Shanks), with Mrs. J. Galloway, Alan Lamson and Rupert Claxton taking the solo parts.

The memorial tablet is a very handsome piece of work, and is indeed worthy of its object. The names inscribed on it are W. Cassels Buchanan, P. C. Caverhill, Ed. F. Corhill, James Crawford, John Eason, Lloyd Fleming, William G. Haslett, M.C., Foster Hazlett, James Hawkins, Frederick G. Martyn, Andrew Myllmaki, J. Max Mollaghan, Garfield R. Rogers, and G. S. Sills.

The Italian Government is taking measures to strengthen the semi-military forces for the maintenance of order in case of civil disturbances. A new corps known as the Royal Guard, has been organized to act in a police capacity.

SHORT OF BREATH

Could Hardly Walk Without Resting

When you go to a physician to be examined for any heart trouble one of the first questions he asks is: "Are you short of breath?" Now, when the heart becomes affected there ensues a feeling of a choking sensation, a shortness of breath, palpitation, throbbing, irregular beating, smothering sensation; dizziness and a weak, sinking, all-gone feeling of oppression and anxiety.

On the first sign of the heart becoming weakened or the nerves unstrung Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are just the remedy you require. They regulate and stimulate the heart, and strengthen and restore the whole nervous system.

Mr. Stephen Cronse, Edst Clifford, N.S., writes:—"I suffered for five years with heart trouble. I could hardly walk from the house to the barn without resting as I used to get so short of breath. Doctors could not help me. My wife told me to get a box of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills and I felt better after taking them; three boxes made me quite well. I am now helping my son to work the farm, and can truthfully say I feel like a different man."
