

THE MAN ON WATCH

It's a fat chance the Board of Trade has to get daylight saving next year with the farmers running things.

If the farmers throughout Ontario do no better at governing than they have done for the victory loan, their party won't last long.

Another Kingston watchmaker is to the fore. Henry Wood has invented an automobile valve that promises to have a big run.

The giddy young people of Kingston seem to be going crazy over jazz music. They don't appreciate real music.

Why should Laidlaw's staff not be a lively dancing bunch? Are they not always dancing attention upon customers?

The church organ sometimes needs tuning as badly as the cracked voices of the bass and tenor.

China is not the only place that needs men to carry on, dear stationary man. All walks of life are in need of people to carry on.

Well, Christy carried on pretty well this season in building roads. The locomotive workers strike gave him labor that otherwise could not have been secured.

These four retiring professors of Queen's college might be admitted into one of the veterans' organizations. They have been faithful warriors against ignorance.

There should certainly be more singing in the schools. The Lampman heartily agrees with Col. Gallop on this subject. In the old days there was a singing master in the Kingston common schools and many a concert was given in the old Martin opera house.

An eight-hour day in the town and a twelve-hour day on the farm. Was that the agreement between the United Farmers and the labor party?

The Lampman is of the opinion that no matter where Kingston may in future secure its drinking water, the supply will have to be chemically treated against pollution. In this year of grace everything on earth is polluted, and pure water is only a name.

Kingston may well feel proud over Premier Duggan's appointment of the most important post in his Cabinet to one of its distinguished sons in the person of Lawyer Nickle. And it can likewise feel proud over Ex-Premier Hearst trying to save the neck of his late government by choosing Brig. General Ross as solicitor general in his Cabinet. Nickle and Ross may now be known as "the savers."

While we would have liked to have seen both "Bill" Nickle and "Doc" Ross doing Cabinet duty, still the people will feel happier by having both of them in their midst daily, helping along the old home town, Kingston needs them as much as the Province at large.

THE TOWN WATCHMAN

CALLS FOR ORGANIZATION

Eastern Districts Want Share Hydro Development. Brockville, Nov. 15.—At a meeting of the Public Utilities Commission of Brockville the power situation as affecting the town and Eastern Ontario generally was discussed. With a view to securing sufficient power at a proper price and a just share of the huge sums expended in Hydro matters, a resolution was passed urging the municipalities of Eastern Ontario to organize for the purpose of expediting the development of electrical power at the Long Sault Rapids. This is believed to be the only adequate source of supply which can be obtained to relieve the situation and furnish the power. The manager of the Brockville Commission was instructed to prepare for an organizational meeting of the municipal representatives here at the earliest convenient date.

OLD ESTATES GO.

Great Land Holdings in England Seemed to Be Doomed Now.

Many of the big estates of English landholders, which have given to the countryside of Great Britain that charm of old-world atmosphere which has made it so attractive to American tourists are doomed, according to London newspapers, if the present tendency in the real estate market in the British Isles continues.

Heavy taxation, according to these newspapers, has compelled many old families to dispose of their vast acres, and while the estates are being eagerly bought, in few cases is an effort made by the new owners to retain them in their entirety. As a result, England bids fair to become in the not distant future a nation of small landlords.

Many families of the large estate owning class, while retaining part of their property, have found it necessary to cut up other parts into small portions to sell. Others have sold outright to members of the class of recent rich created by the war, who themselves have disposed of smaller of the acquired estates to prattling owners.

The old-style English squire, it is predicted, soon will be a rarity, or will entirely have disappeared. The type of country gentleman who took a personal interest in his tenants will be no more. Village life will be completely changed because of the new class of tenants.

Incidentally, it is reported, that the cherished institution of fox hunting is being spoiled. Since many small farmers own their lands outright, and since these lands represent to them their living, they are refusing to let the hounds and riders pass over their fields. And as the land is coming more and more cut up into small parcels, the hunters are finding themselves more and more restricted.

Queen in Her Own Right. On the west coast of Ireland stands a castle bearing the euphonious name of Carrig-a-Hooley. Several centuries ago this was the favorite castle of Grace O'Malley, an Irish Amazon, who took unto herself the title of queen and ruled over several counties in a fashion not at all in accordance with sixteenth century ideas of femininity, says the Detroit News.

Home rule in Ireland was demanded even in those days. When Queen Elizabeth offered to make the Irish maid a countess, history reports that she answered proudly, "I consider myself as great a queen as your majesty."

On her voyage from the English court to her mountain domain, Queen Grace stopped at Howth Castle, and but coldly received by the lord, she succeeded to teach him hospitality by abducting his son and heir, releasing the child only on the promise that the gates of Howth Castle were to swing open always at the dining hour.

A Mild Hint. "Two bags and a hatbox," said the tourist, who was travelling for the first time in Scotland, arriving at a little wayside station. The porter mournfully collected the articles and put the man on board a car. "And, by the way, porter," said the passenger, "what do they usually give you here for a tip?" The porter jerked his thumb over his shoulder. "See you big boose among the trees?" he asked. "Yes, but what has that got to do with it?" "Well, that's the workhouse and it's fu' o' auld railway porters!"

Suspended in Commons. London, Nov. 15.—In the House of Commons Jeremiah MacVeagh, Nationalist member for South Down, Ireland, was suspended because he told James Ian MacPherson, Chief Secretary for Ireland, not to be "impertinent," when the secretary replied to a question with a remark which Mr. MacVeagh considered as insinuating that he was a Sinn Fein sympathizer. The member refused to withdraw the expression, declaring that before many months had passed the entire House would have the same opinion as he held regarding Mr. MacPherson.

Following an illness of two weeks' duration, Arthur Bramley, a life long resident of Brockville, and a popular employee of the Grand Trunk Railway at this terminal, passed away on Thursday at the age of forty-one years. Dr. T. F. Chamberlain, ex-M.P., is closing his sanatorium at Morrisburg.

Took Prince's Cap. Montreal, Nov. 15.—How John Kyle, a Toronto soldier, walked calmly into the Royal suite at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel and through a cordon of servants, police and detectives, and purloined a cap and some badges belonging to the Prince of Wales during his Royal Highness' visit here, was learned to-day when the (Kyle) was arrested on a charge of stealing watches at Belleville. Kyle was quietly turned loose after he stole the Prince's cap.

Miss Elisabeth Hedderston, Smith's Falls, had her arm severely lacerated while at work in the steam laundry at Perth. Her arm was drawn into a machine. New York capitalists would like to locate an extensive steel plant in Belleville.
