

AN AMBASSADOR A STRIKE AND, A ROYAL WELCOME

BY COURTESY OF C.P.R.

- (1) Earle Grey at Waterloo Station, leaving London for America to serve as the new British Ambassador: Reading left to right, Lord Bryce, Earl Reading, Earl Grey and Lord Curson
- (2) England's Railway Strike. An inspector alone is in charge of many signal heavers.
- (3) Billingsgate, the Great London Fish Market. Owing to railway strike, fish had to be brought to market by Government lorries
- (4) Lieut.-Col. Sherwood-Kelly, V.C., D.S.O., who volunteered to look after the horses of the S. E. & C. R. at Blackfriars Stables during the strike. He was on friendly terms with the strikers.
- (5) M. Paderewski, President of the Polish Republic congratulating airmen who volunteered for service in the Polish Aviation Corps.
- (6) England's Great Railway Strike.—Thousands waiting for their train home.
- (7) Field Marshal Sir Douglas Haig's car used on the western front, sold by auction.

BY COURTESY OF C.P.R.

BY COURTESY OF C.P.R.

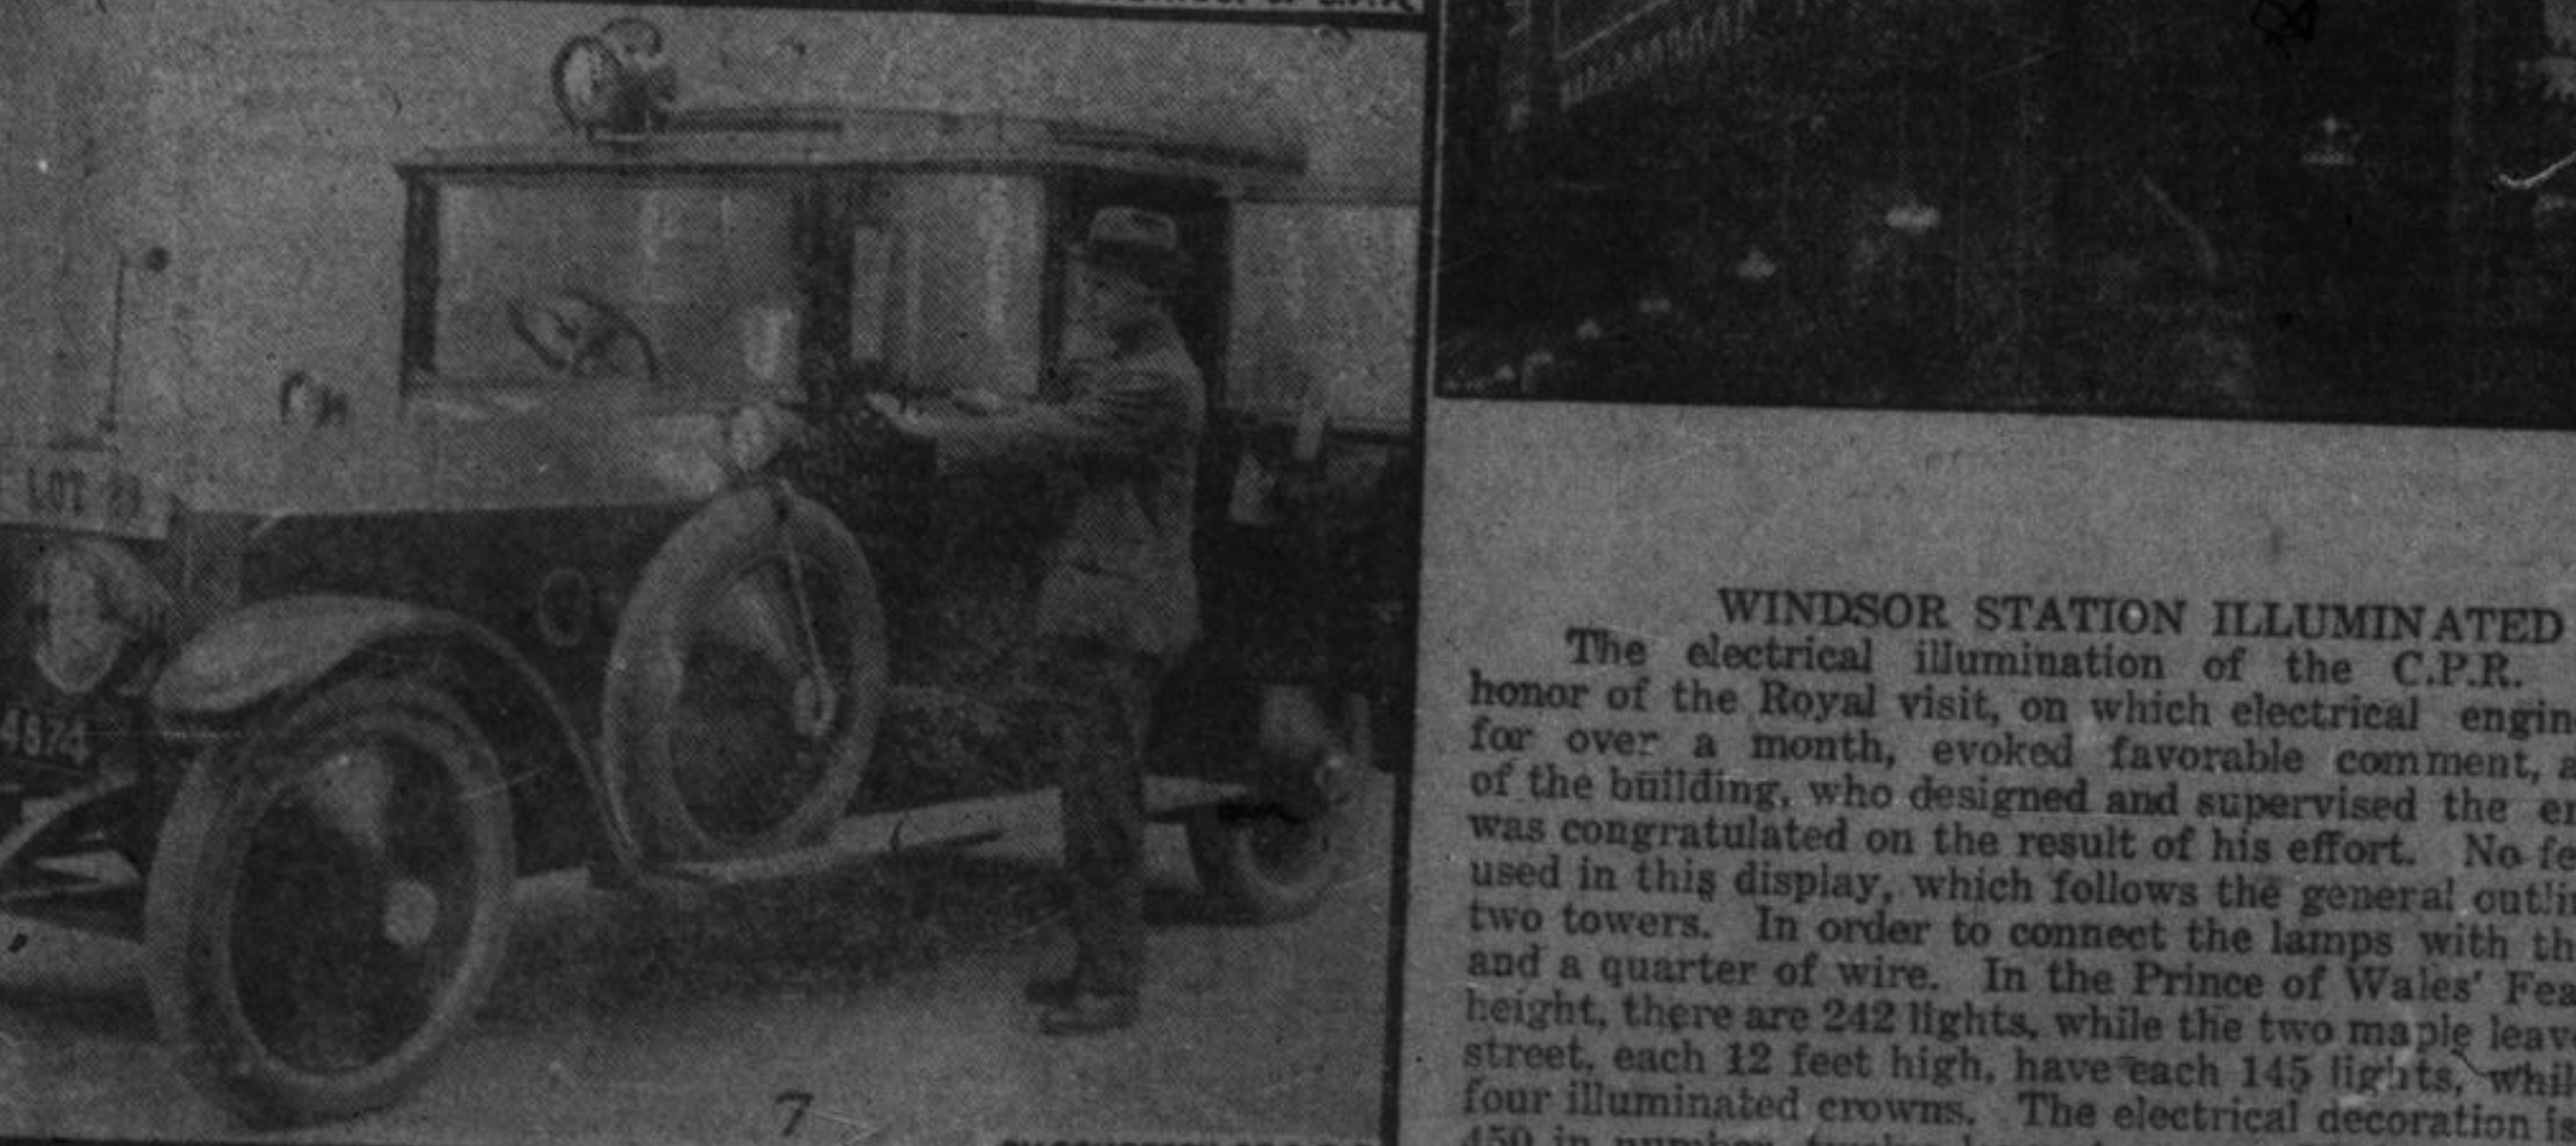

BY COURTESY OF C.P.R.

BY COURTESY OF C.P.R.

BY COURTESY OF C.P.R.

BY COURTESY OF C.P.R.

WINDSOR STATION ILLUMINATED FOR PRINCE'S VISIT.
 The electrical illumination of the C.P.R. Windsor Station at Montreal in honor of the Royal visit, on which electrical engineers and decorators were at work for over a month, evoked favorable comment, and Mr. J. W. Bell, the superintendent of the building, who designed and supervised the erection of this elaborate decoration, was congratulated on the result of his effort. No fewer than 7,752 individual lights were used in this display, which follows the general outlines of the huge edifice, including the two towers. In order to connect the lamps with the seventeen switches, there is a mile and a quarter of wire. In the Prince of Wales' Feathers, which are 13 feet 6 inches in height, there are 242 lights, while the two maple leaves on St. Antoine street and Osborne street, each 12 feet high, have each 145 lights, while there are 55 lights in each of the four illuminated crowns. The electrical decoration is supplemented with a display of flags, 450 in number, twelve long streamers 31 feet each in length, and 69 shields each 4

PRINCE PRESENTED WITH STRAWBERRIES PICKED ON OCTOBER 2.
 If His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales had any preconceived idea that Southern Alberta had grown nothing this year owing to the drought, he probably has reason to change his mind after being presented at Lethbridge with a four-pound box of most luscious strawberries packed on Thursday morning from his own garden by John Hamilton, who owns one of the farms on the C. P. R. Ready-made Farms Colony, 18 miles east of the city. The fruit was the ever-bearing variety and as fine in color, texture and flavor as any grown in the middle of the season. It remained for the Coaldale district to supply the royal table with strawberries picked in October.