TODAY'S WATCHWORD —Sickness Prevention

The guiding inspiration of modern medical science is Sickness Prevention. As this idea has worked itself out, smallpox, cholera, yellow fever and other infectious diseases already have given way. And science has finally developed an effective agent against the plague which is the originating point of over 90% of disease.

That plague is constipation, and that agent Nujol. The dangers of constipation are so widespread because by reducing the body's power of resistance through self-poisoning it makes it easier for any disease to develop. Nujol by relieving constipation prevents the absorption of the poisons which otherwise would be taken into the blood and infect the whole system.

Leading medical authorities agree that pills, salts, castor oil, etc., simply force and weaken the system. Nujol softens the food waste and encourages the intestinal muscles to act naturally.

Nujol helps Nature establish easy, thorough bowel evacuation at regular intervals—the healthiest habit in the world. Get a bottle from your druggist today.

For valuable health booklet—"Thirty Feet of Danger"—free, write Nujol Laboratories, Standard Oil Co. (New Jersey), 50 Broadway, New York.

Warning: Nujol is sold only in sealed bottles showing the Nujol Trade Mark as an "Nujol". Do not suffer from imitations.

LOVE and MARRIED LIFE by the noted author Idah McGione Gibson

Mrs. Gordon Must Not Be Unhappy.

Reaching my room after leaving John and his mother, my feelings were such that for a moment I thought I was dying. My heart was beating, beating 'way up in my throat. My knees were trembling and, convulsively putting my hand to my forehead, I found it covered with drops of cold moisture.

Blindly I groped my way to a divan. As I did so I caught sight of my face. For a moment I did not realize that it was mine—so lined and ashen it was. The weary eyes looked at me, and from their effort to keep from crying. Those eyes begged me to give them the poor consolation of tears.

But although the sobs came, and shook me from head to foot, I could not weep. I threw myself on the bed saying: "I can not bear it; I can not bear it! Nobody wants us, baby!"

And then I thought of my own dear little mother. How she would welcome me with open arms, although her heart might break at my sorrow! How she would care for me and a baby that would call her "Granny!"

Writes to Mother.

With sudden determination and strength which a moment before I thought I did not possess, I wrote to John's writing table and wrote:

"Dear Mother: I am coming to you. I am coming to you to be with you always!

"I can not live here any longer. I do not know my own husband, he is so strange, so thoughtless, so selfish!

"Mother dear, when I told him this morning that I am to become a mother, he was angry with me. He made me feel that in some way I was to blame and that what I thought would be the crowning of my womanhood, was in his eyes only an annoyance and hindrance to some plans he had for the immediate future.

"Mother dear, I hope that I won't make you too unhappy, but I am coming—coming right away!

"Your unhappy KATHERINE." I read this letter over carefully and the picture of my dear little mother, reading it, arose before me, and I knew that not even the death of my father, whom she had loved so devotedly, would bring her such intolerable pain.

Oh, how I wanted the consolation of her loving arms. I wanted to put my head in her lap and cry out my disappointments and sorrow. And then I remembered that she had only a little time to live and I could not sadden her declining years with my sorrow. It would not be brave, and above all, the thing that I despised most in this world was lack of courage.

I pushed the letter to one side, and wrote another:

"This is to tell you, darling mother that I arrived home this morning to find that things were not nearly so bad as I had feared. John had an automobile collision yesterday, and while he was not hurt, the occupants of the other motor were badly injured. When John telegraphed me he thought that one of them was going to die. Fortunately the doctor has pronounced both of the victims out of danger.

"Of course I am very tired tonight because I have been with John at the hospital today, and at many other places where I felt my presence would help John. I am not going to write you a very long letter tonight, but I just felt that I could not go to sleep without letting you know that everything is all right with your loving daughter, KATHERINE."

This letter I sealed quickly without reading it, and stamped it and called a man to mail it, before my courage should fail me. As the man came to my door he said:

"Dinner is served Mrs. Gordon."

After bathing my face I stumbled down the stairs, hardly knowing what I was doing, for I had made the most momentous decision of my life, and in doing so I had told my mother another lie for John, and that lie had sapped away a little more of my love and trust in him.

John entered the dining-room just as I did and smiled cheerily.

"Good girl!" he said. "I had it out with mother after you were gone. She is having dinner in her room. I told her I would not have married Elizabeth Moreland if she had been the last woman in the world."

I could not refrain from saying: "Would that have been the truth yesterday John?"

Altogether Too Bossy.

"Don't be nasty," he begged, "because we're going to be all right from now on, and besides Katherine, I think it is true—I don't think I would have married that woman under any circumstances. She is altogether too bossy. I want a wife to comfort me, to love me, and one for which my friends will envy me. I don't want one to interfere all the time with my big plans, with her little feminine schemes."

"Sometimes, John," I said, "it seems that God and nature interfere with your schemes without asking your consent." He frowned at my reference and I knew that I should never be able to make him reconciled to our coming baby. My only hope was that it would bring its welcome with it. As it was, my reference changed my husband's entire mood and he continued his dinner in silent silence.

Or and Sable—Black and Gold—So Much Admired by the Knights and Ladies of Old, Is Revived in Paris and from There Comes with a Strong Appeal to Us.

Of all the coats of arms ever devised by any college of heralds none were ever more knightly and truly splendid than those that were blazoned or and sable. The knight who went into battle or the tournament, like the black prince, with the device on his shield done entirely in black, brought forth more admiration than the knight whose escutcheon showed azure, gules, vert and the rest.

Black and Gold Always Liked.

In mediaeval costumery you will see that there was always a strong feeling of admiration for this combination of black and gold. Cloth worn with a woof of gold and a warp of black was greatly admired and known as mordore, which is still used to indicate a rich brown produced apparently by an interweaving of black and gold. Certain periods in those times of old seem to be peculiarly characterized by this aesthetic pleasure in black and gold and it would seem that we have entered a period of this same sort in our own day.

A few days ago the most charming window in the fashionable shopping section was one which contained clothes and accessories of various sorts, all of which were made of combined black and gold. Evening frocks of gold lace and black tulle, hats of black velvet with metallic brocade, turbans of gold net with black feathers. In another shop window that forms the facade of a veritable mecca of smart footwear, you could see that the or and sable idea had had its effect on the designers of footwear, for there were metallic evening shoes of black and gold cloth, and shown to wear with them were exquisite black silk stockings, with clocking in threads of gold.

For Day and Evening. Then, too, black and gold jewelry takes precedence nowadays. Jet is set with gold in a way that would have been surprising a few years ago. Not only for evening apparel is this the vogue. For charming women go about in the daytime with black frocks or suits made resplendent by an interweaving of gold.

Even such materials as duvety and serge and tricotine are combined with gold and black brocade. Sometimes the richer fabric takes the form of a gilet on a coat suit. Sometimes it forms a whole section of the frock or coat and sometimes it is mere embellishment in the form of cuffs or collar or button covering.

TURKEY STUFFING.

There are cooks who will tell you that you spoil a bird by stuffing it and that turkeys or chickens ought always to be roasted without stuffing from the bird and therefore takes somewhat from the deliciousness of the flavor. But what is Thanksgiving turkey without the stuffing? Our pumpkin pies may have to be made without eggs this year, and the cranberries without sugar, so pray do have some stuffing in the turkey, for old time's sake.

It is hard to find an exact rule for making stuffing in the old-fashioned cook books because no housewife ever did go about it with that precision that demands to know how many spoons of this seasoning or that, and how many cups of the other ingredients. It depends on the size of the turkey as to how much bread crumbs you shall use, and everything else depends on the amount of bread crumbs. So there you are. Here is the characteristic rule, as given by an old-time housewife who rarely did make good turkey stuffing: "Have ready your bread crumbs, mixed with butter, pepper, salt, thyme or sweet marjoram." Another recipe simply calls for chopped sausage and bread crumbs, mixed with butter, pepper, salt and thyme to flavor.

Here is a more explicit rule for making good stuffing for the turkey. Put into a saucepan four tablespoons of butter and a half teaspoon of onion juice. When the butter is melted add a cup and a quarter of fine bread crumbs, two teaspoons each of minced parsley and celery, a teaspoon of salt and pepper to season. Toss until well heated, then two tablespoons of white onions minced and fried yellow in butter. Mix these ingredients lightly together, then bind with two tablespoons of melted butter.

Philadelphia stuffing, as it is called, is made thus: Crumb fine two quarts of stale bread. Season with two even tablespoons of salt, one teaspoon of pepper, two tablespoons each of powdered summer savory and minced parsley and one of powdered sage. Rub a cupful of butter through the crumbs and fill the cavity and sew it up.

Many a man's reputation casts a shadow over his character.

HAD ECZEMA For Over 28 Years

Eczema or Salt Rheum manifests itself in little round blisters, which contain an extremely irritating fluid. These break and subsequently a crust is formed and the intense burning, itching and smarting, especially at night or when the part is exposed to any strong heat is almost unbearable.

The success which Burdock Blood Bitters has met with in skin diseases of such severity is due to its wonderful blood cleansing and purifying properties, and we know of no other remedy that has done or can do, so much for those who are almost driven to distraction with the terrible torture.

Mr. James Walker, 152 Niagara St., Hamilton, Ont., writes:—"I have been using Burdock Blood Bitters for some months past, and find it an excellent remedy for skin eruptions. I have suffered from eczema for over 28 years, and have tried almost everything you could think of. I was recommended to use Burdock Blood Bitters, and I am now clear of my skin trouble. It is certainly a good remedy and I shall recommend it to all my friends."
