WILLIAMS NEW SCALE PIANO

WHEN the price is no higher, wouldn't you prefer to buy a Canadian-made high-grade piano? There's only one answer, and that is "Yes." The Williams New Scale ranks among the world's best. The late Queen Victoria chose one for Windsor Castle. Famous artists like Melba, McCormick, Clara Butt, Kathleen Parlow, Alma Gluck, and hundreds of others, all choose the Williams New Scale for their Canadian tours. Facts like this enable you to form an idea of its quality—a quality that meets the most exacting tests. And the Williams is made in Canada by Canadians, for Canadians.

Give yourself a musical treat—go to any Williams Dealer and hear the Williams New Scale. Illustrated literature sent on request.

JAPAN TEA

The beverage of countless centuries—is of the same matchless quality today as a thousand years ago. It cannot be improved. The Government of Japan guarantees the purity of Japan Tea—the people of Canada testify as to its quality.

"The salts of tea reduce the amount of solid food necessary and maintain the vigor."

LOVE and MARRIED LIFE by the noted author Idah McGione Gibson

A Gold Pocketbook—Empty. Right after dinner, of which I could only eat a few mouthfuls, John followed me up stairs to our room. Entering, he threw himself into a big chair and gave a sigh of relief. "I am glad Katherine, that we have a little peace all our own, where we can get away from everyone. I had a fine time with mother after you left."

"Well, I felt that I could not stand any more, John," I said as I prepared for bed. "Don't you want to talk it over, girl?" was his surprised comment as he saw me sink down between the sheets and turn my face to the wall. "Talk it over? I never want to hear it mentioned again. The only prayer I have this evening is that I can forget this day and all its happenings utterly."

He fussed about the room aimlessly for a few moments and then in rather an embarrassed voice asked: "By the way, Katherine, you didn't use all the money I sent you, did you?"

"No!"

"Wants Four Hundred Dollars." "Well, I'm a little hard up and I wish I could have about $400."

"I haven't got $400."

"What in the devil did you use more than $100 for? It costs less than thirty to come home."

"While I do not recognize your right to ask me what I have done with that money, had I spent it all, I will say that $50 of it went for the all-too-ornate wreath that you sent for my father's funeral."

"But—but, you would have sent your father some flowers—?" he stammered.

"Very probably, I would have placed a few flowers near him, but that wreath was not for my father."

"John, let us be honest with each other and ourselves just for tonight, at least, if never again. You know very well that $50 wreath was bought, not for my father, but for the sake of impressing the people of my home town. You ordered it and forgot to pay for it."

"I told them to send the bill to me. Why didn't they do it?"

"Naturally in my own town they would send the bill to you, in care of me. However, that is not the point. Do you realize, John that you have never offered me any money since we were married?"

"Has Her Own Car." "Well what do you want money for? You have a charge account in every store in this town, or if you haven't you can have it if you wish. You have your own car and so have no use for a taxi. Your household accounts are sent to the office and I take care of them. I can't for the life of me see why you need any money."

"I had to borrow $15 from Henriette to go home when I was called by father's illness and death."

"Well, that thing wouldn't happen again in fifty years," was John's comment.

"Oh, I hate this bickering and explanations. All my life, John, I have had a certain amount of money given me for my expenses each month. True, it was very small, but I had the pleasure of spending it as I pleased. I could fee a servant for doing me a service. I could perform an unexpected charity. I could buy a dish of ice cream for a friend. Why, if it had not been that I had some money left of my allowance, I do not know what I should have done since I have been your wife. I spent that, however, when I paid part of my fare home."

"Where is that allowance now?" he parried.

"My father's affairs were not in as good shape as we thought, and although provision was made for me in his will, I relinquished it so that my mother could live as comfortably as she always has."

"That's where you and I will always differ, Katherine. A woman should not expect to live as comfortably after her husband dies. The provider—the financier—is gone. If your father had been well enough to take care of his own business and kept his money in his own hands, instead of letting a couple of women un him, he would probably have been in much better circumstances at his death."

"Going Into Details." "Now, you have spent about $80," he continued after a moment's thought.

"Oh, I don't know what I have spent; you will find what is left over on the desk in my gold pocket-book. By the way, the jeweler's bill for it came in yesterday. I think that is altogether too expensive a piece of jewelry for me to wear and—a gold pocketbook with nothing in it means nothing to me."

"That's a nice way of thanking a man for his presents—and I thought you would like it very much. Bess Moreland helped me to see—and then he stopped."

"Thank you for your present, John, but you might as well return it. I shall never carry it again."

HERE'S a welcome to the returned soldier and his bride. May their wedded life be a long and happy one. If she is a "British Bride" she will be very fond of tea—and good tea, at that.

She will first be attracted to Red Rose Tea by the name which will remind her of the "Red Rose" of "Old England".

And when she tries it she will again be reminded of the "Homeland", for she will find Red Rose Tea the same kind of Tea that she has used at home—a rich, full-flavored blend, consisting chiefly of ASSAM teas grown in British-owned plantations in northern India.

Red Rose Tea is sold always in sealed packages.

RED ROSE TEA "is good tea"
