Baker-Robinson Wedding.

The marriage was quietly solemn zed in Toronto, on Tuesday, Dec. 16th, of Miss Jessie (Billie) Robinson, daughter of J. R. Robinson and or the open shaft of a deep mine and for 2 Weeks at the Regent Theatre, A. D. in France, to Captain E. A. Baker, M.C., Croix de Guerre, a graduate of St. Dunstan's School for the Blind, now in charge of education for the blind department at Ottawa. The ceremony took place at ten o'clock in the morning in the church. The service was taken by the Rev. C. Simpson, grand-uncle of the bride, who also officiated at the marriage of the bride's father and mother. The bride, who was unattended, was given away by her father; she was wearing a striped cloth travelling suit with hat to match. L M. Wood attended the groom as best nan. After the ceremony the bridal party drove to the residence of the bride's father, 63 Wellesley street, for the wedding breakfast. Captain 9th. Barristers appear to have had no official costume until the end of the official costume until the end of the 17th century. Before then the costume worn by students at the Inns of Court and by "Utter Barristers" consisted of a stuff gown, and sometimes, in term time, a round cap, which was worn in Hall or in church. When the judges adopted wigs the barristers did so too, but while the judge's wig has only one-vertical curl president. A. B. Cunningham. Cartwright, manager, 87 Clarence street. Kingston. just above the tail of the wig, the barrister's has three rows of horizontal curls going all the way round. The silk gown, full-bottomed wig and black Court dress now worn by King's Counsel are generally held to date from the funeral of Queen Mary, being the mourning dress worn by the wish of King William for a considerable period after the TO Queen's death, and adopted as a convenient costume ever since. The jest of Chief Baron Pollock that "the Bar of England went into mourning at the death of Queen Anne and never came out again" goes some ways. in support of this theory, though it vestry of St. James' Presbyterian | seems to involve a conflict with other authorities in the matter of the precise Queen who was concerned.
