POWER OF DOLLAR IS EASILY SHOWN

When It Is Sent Out of Town, However, to Pay For What Can Be Bought at Home, It Is Gone Forever.

(Copyright.)

It is a rather wonderful thing, when you stop to think about it what a striking manner on several occasions by means of a very simple experiment. If you want to see just how important a role a silver dollar or a dollar bill plays in the life of a community here is the way to do it. Just attach a tag to the dollar and turn it loose, with the request that every person who receives the dollar make a note on the tag as to how he received it.

Here is the way it works: Smith, the lumber dealer, who first possesses the dollar, buys some groceries from Brown, who had done some work for Brown. About that time Jones, the plumber, who had done some work for Brown, sends his collector around and Brown pays the bill with this dollar. Jones owes Green, the printer, a small advertising bill, so he had just put the dollar in his cash drawer when in comes Black, the milkman, who owes White, the carpenter, for some work done on his dairy house, so now he takes the dollar that Green has paid him and pays up what Smith, the lumber dealer, owes for some lumber that he bought from Smith. Smith, who owes White, the carpenter, squares up his account with White. White, who owes Jones, the plumber, has been able to pay his plumbing bill, Jones has squared up with the printer, and so on, all around the circle.

What Might Have Happened.

Now, suppose that Smith, instead of buying his groceries from Brown, had purchased them from a mail order house in a far distant city and sent pay Jones, the plumber. Brown would not have had that dollar to pay the printer who could not have paid his printing bill; the printer would not have got the money for the work he had done for the milkman and Smith would not have got the money which White owed him for lumber.

That is all so simple that it requires no student of economics or professor of mathematics to figure it out. Anyone can see that when Smith houses flourish, that dollar is gone so far as Smith and Jones and Green and the rest of the people in Smith's town are concerned. That dollar that stands out most strikingly, is in Smith's town. And the thing that the man who first spends the dollar, is hurt just as much when he sends that dollar out of town as is the home grocer from whom he might have bought his groceries.

Now just multiply this one dollar by a hundred or a thousand or ten thousand. One dollar may not seem to make much difference in the average town, but a thousand dollars or even a hundred dollars does make a difference. Just as one dollar will pay a dozen or a hundred small bills, a hundred or a thousand dollars will pay a dozen or a hundred big bills. When Brown, the grocer, owes a thousand dollars and can't pay it, he is headed for the bankruptcy courts. When Jones, the plumber, Brown, he is headed in the same direction as Brown. And so it goes all around the circle until it hits Smith or a dozen Smiths who have sent their money out of town to add to the fortunes of the mail order men.

Buyer One Who Is Hurt.

Thus it will be seen that this buy-at-home proposition is really a selfish one with the man who buys the goods. He is not hurting the home merchant when he sends his money out of town, any more than he is hurting himself.

Every sensible man knows that his livelihood depends upon whether business in his town is good or not. If business is not good, he cannot make a good living for himself and his family, no matter how hard he may work, and business cannot be good if the business men in the town are not helping the home merchant only incidentally. They are butting their own bread. When they send their money to the mail order house, they are not only hurting the home merchant incidentally but—something more important to them—they are likely to be taking the bread out of the mouths of their own children.

THE ENGLISH RULES TO GOVERN BOXING

Olympic Committee at Antwerp Next August Have Adopted Them.

A significant point in connection with the Olympic tournament at Albany next year, to be held August 15 to 19, is that contests will be governed by English amateur boxing rules, which differ considerably from those in vogue in the United States, so not only will the scrappers have to be familiarized themselves with the laws of the game abroad.

The vital difference in the rules is that a boxer who fights a defensive bout will earn as many points in the estimation of the judges as if he was on the aggressive all the time. Neither in vigorous nor in the least count when the other fellow puts up a fantastic defence and prances around the ring, in conducting the bouts there will be two judges and the referee, the latter being outside the ring, but with the platform so arranged that he can walk around and keep his eyes on the boxers.

Whenever the judges fail to agree, the referee gives the decision. Amateur bouts are generally confined to three rounds, that is, two rounds of three minutes and one of four. For the first two rounds the winner scores five points each round and the best man in the third round is awarded seven points, and not more or less.

In the recent tour of the American boxers to the Scandinavian countries they had to box under English rules and their eyes were opened to the conditions under which the men from here will have to contend at Antwerp. Benjamin Levine, who accompanied the men as a representative of the A.A.U., told some interesting things in connection with the trip. It appears that Frank Cassidy, the local lightweight, who has a very aggressive style, did not appeal to the Danish and Swedish judges, which accounts for the fact that he won only one final bout. In the only bout in which Ashton Donze, the New Orleans bantamweight, met defeat he was the aggressor all the way.

Time and time again he begged his opponent to stand still until they got together to do some fighting, but it was useless. The Dane made good use of his legs and finally won. Levine said that amateurism was so rampant in Northern Europe that if anything in the professional line was mentioned before a Norwegian, Danish or Swedish boxer, he would feel insulted. In these three countries Levine added that soccer football was all the craze.

GOVERNMENT UNITED

German Fighting Campaign for Monarchy Restoration.

Berlin, Dec. 30.—The never ceasing, secret and open agitation for the restoration of the monarchy by Pan-Germans, Junkers and militarists and the equally dangerous sprouts of the communists have led the government still closer together. During the holidays the leading Socialists, Centrists and Democrats decided to form a "Republican League," in which they hope to concentrate all the anti-monarchistic forces that doubtless this movement will be very popular and highly welcomed by numerous persons who, though they do not like the present government and do not belong to any party, are even more opposed to a return to the old regime.

A $500 stock of perfumery in look like thirty cents. Somehow the memory of our last year seems to be bad.
