Do you want ordinary clothing turned out like so many pieces of machinery, each exactly the same without a spark of individuality or personality?

You do not.

Or do you want ready-made clothing that looks as though you really had a hand in selecting the fabric, the cut and the style into which it is made?

You do most emphatically.

Theatrical

At the Grand. To-night will be the first presentation of the Grand's new big time vaudeville policy. The acts are all the best obtainable, being booked by the B. F. Keith Vaudeville Exchange. The management has done its utmost to procure none but the cleanest, brightest and most entertaining acts on the road. The bill for to-night, Tuesday and Wednesday consists of Keno and Wagner in a number of the latest popular songs and dances; Knight and Gale in an act of comedy and harmony singing that has made a big hit wherever it has been put on; Lou Elliott in a most unusual act of character camouflage, and Hamlin and Mack in an extremely clever novelty entitled, "A Vaudeville Surprise." In keeping with the above vaudeville programme, there is a superlative feature picture, "For a Woman's Honor," in which the eminent English actor, H. B. Warner, plays the leading part. The play is a tense drama of Oriental intrigue and romance, and has all the gripping fascination of Mr. Warner's previous productions. There is also one of the side-splitting Arbuckle comedies, called, "Patsy and the Mermaids," and an interesting reel of Pictorial Life. This bill is seen to-night, Tuesday and Wednesday.—Adv.

At Griffin's. William Farnum will headline the programme at Griffin's for to-day, Tuesday and Wednesday in "The Last of the Duanes," a picturization of Zane Grey's triumphant novel of red-blooded romance. This is a William Fox production that reaches the heights of motion picture possibility. "The Last of the Duanes" is a wonderful romantic novel of love and danger, thrilling in every breathless situation, a live chapter centering in the history made by that most gallant body of men, the Texas Rangers. The picture, photographically also, is a masterpiece. The rugged scenery, the beauty of the mountain fastnesses, give fitting setting for the whirlwind action in which Buck Duane matches his courage and cunning first against the Rangers and later as their ally against the outlaws from whom he has rescued the girl who in the end saves him. The most ardent admirers of William Farnum will not be disappointed by their idol, for he gives a wonderful forceful portrayal of Buck Duane in this stirring Zane Grey story. He has never been seen in a finer role. Don't overlook seeing this picture.—Adv.

At The Strand. "Children of Banishment," Mitchell Lewis' second Select Picture, is one of the biggest and finest pictures of the North-West that has ever been filmed. Mitchell Lewis has the role of Dick Bream, the foreman of the Hill and Burchard Lumber Company. Allen Mackenzie and his wife, Eloise, in their course of mysterious wanderings "from somewhere to nowhere"—the "children of banishment"—enter Dick's life and become his partners in his effort to purchase a vast tract of government-owned virgin forest which Dick has discovered and "crushed" before these great timber lands can be monopolized by the unscrupulous Hill and Burchard Company. After an exciting struggle, Dick succeeds in gaining control of this valuable piece of timber, only to find the one road for shipping logs out from it blocked by his former employees, for revenge. A thrilling fight between Dick, Allen and their men and Hill's gang ensues, during which Hill's barricade of huge logs is blown high into the air, and Dick's right of way firmly established. Select Pictures offers this wonderful and thrilling picture on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday at the Strand Theatre.—Adv.

Major Williams of the Soldier's Re-establishment department has moved into the home formerly occupied by Lieut.-Col. R. J. Gardner. The annual meeting of Frontenac Law Association has been called for this afternoon at the court house. H. Mitchell and B. Budgeon, Alfred Street, were Montreal visitors over the week-end. Deseronto has a town council for 1920 without the expense of an election.
