MERCHANTS DO THEIR PART

Town and Rural Community Are Dependent Upon Each Other—Co-operation Alone Brings Prosperity to Both.

(Copyright.)

Residents of towns and cities everywhere are beginning to realize more acutely the fact that, except under very unusual conditions, their communities will prosper and develop only in proportion to the prosperity and development that comes to the farming sections which surround them.

But this is not a one-sided proposition. If the city is dependent upon the country, so is the country dependent upon the city.

In the language of the street, it is a fifty-fifty proposition. The town needs the country and the country needs the town.

On the other hand the storekeeper needs the business of the farmer. He does not ask the farmer to sell him his products on credit.

But does he always get the farmer's business? Ask the mail order man in the big city or ask the postmaster or the express agent in any town or city in the country.

The mail order man won't sell the farmer 2 cents' worth of goods on one day's credit no matter how badly the farmer may need the goods.
