WAS REMANDED FOR A WEEK

SECURED SUM OF MONEY UNDER FALSE PRETEXTS.

W. J. Place Blamed His Downfall on the Drinking of Lemon Extract— Was Victim of Accident Here Recently.

The charge against Wesley J. Place in the police court on Friday morning was that he did on or about September 23rd last, secure $5 from Smith Bros., jewelers, under false pretences.

The evidence for the prosecution showed that Place called at the store and asked for the loan of $5, stating that the G.W.V.A. had some booths at the fair grounds, and he was conducting one of them, but was short of cash to get in a stock of goods for sale.

Place admitted getting the money, but stated that he had been drinking lemon extract, and that this was responsible for all his trouble. The magistrate found him guilty of the charge, and remanded him for a week. The accused, it will be remembered, suffered a fall some time ago while engaged in painting the smoke stack at the incinerator.

Theatrical

At the Strand.

Presenting a delightful theme in a most charming and artistic manner, the big Paramount picture, "Fires of Faith," was received with every manifestation of pleasure by large audiences at the Strand Theatre yesterday. It is a superb production, and reflects credit upon Charles J. Whittaker, the author, Edward Joseph director, and Catherine Calvert, Ruby de Remer, Eugene O'Brien and Theodore Roberts, who play the leading roles. The story deals with Elizabeth Blake, portrayed by Miss Calvert, a girl who is betrayed by a scoundrel and who sinks into the depths until she becomes a Salvationist. She is rescued from two ruffians in the slums by Harry Hammond, a wealthy man about town, played by Eugene O'Brien, but he in turn is shanghaied aboard a freighter bound for France. He is engaged to Agnes Travers (Ruby de Remer). Elizabeth, after a struggle with the toughs, is picked up unconscious by two Salvation Army women and taken to headquarters. She is redeemed and finally goes to Europe with the workers of the organization when America enters the struggle. Hammond lands in France and enters the air service. Luke Barlow, who loved Elizabeth before her downfall, goes with the American army to France, and Agnes Travers also finds her way to the front, as nurse. Hammond is injured, and Elizabeth aids him in an old chateau. When the contingent moves, he is left behind and hidden in a cellar. Agnes and Lizzie are captured when the Huns take possession. Little Jules, a French lad, aids the escape. They too are hidden in the cellar and finally rescued by the Americans. Luke and Elizabeth meet, and all ends happily.—Adv.

At Griffin's.

An unusually large audience witnessed for the first time in Kingston, the wonderful photoplay "Checkers," which was given its initial presentation at Griffin's last night. That the audience enjoyed every moment of this tremendous story was evidenced by the frequent bursts of applause which were heard throughout the running of the picture. The spectacular race track scene, and the numerous other thrills with which "Checkers" is crammed was followed with breathless interest by all present, and seldom has a picture been shown which equalled this one for tenseness and dramatic suspense. Another very interesting feature of our programme is "Star Over Night," the special picture in which David Belasco, the great producer is shown for the first time in motion pictures. This unique photoplay is one of the series of the stage women's war work, and a notable cast appears along with the eminent star. For a truly entertaining programme, and one which will live long in your memory the above bill should not be overlooked. We might add that "Checkers" our main feature is the big production which has been shown on two continents, and the opportunity to see it at Griffin's at popular prices is a rare one.—Adv.

To The Scholars of St. Mary's. Owing to the scarcity of paper having forced us to again cut the size of the Whig down to twelve pages, the School Editor was to-day compelled to leave out the stories received from St. Mary's School. This is exceedingly to be regretted, as the St. Mary's boys have been very faithful in sending in their stories, which will be given full prominence in next Friday's School British Whig. The stories are being kept for next week, and will appear then without fail, along with any others that may be sent in during the week.—School Editor.

Machine Gun Sports. Much interest is being evinced in the announcement made by the Machine Gun Brigade of the many open events in connection with the athletic tournaments being held throughout the winter and spring. The rules governing the different competitions will be announced in a few days, but entries may be sent at once to headquarters of the brigade. No person with professional standing will be allowed to participate.
