St. Ambrose the Fearless

ST. AMBROSE, one of the most able, fearless and transparent men that ever graced episcopal authority, was the John Knox of the early church. This man who dared openly to rebuke his sovereign for his sins and heresies has had few successors in any age. Chrysostom, Luther and Knox come readily to the mind, but Ambrose stands almost unique in this, that he not only reformed, but he punished, and brought the greatest emperor since Constantine "to the stool of penitence." He is paralleled only by Hildebrand and Becket.

Ambrose, a noble youth of the Roman Empire, had been appointed governor of Milan at the age of 34 and that very year, A. D. 374, an event occurred that changed the whole current of his life. Archbishop Auxentius died and the See of Milan became vacant. It was an age of factions, heresies and tumults and the sudden death threw the whole city into the wildest excitement. The emperor wisely declined to interfere with the election. Rival parties could not agree on a candidate. A tumult arose. Ambrose had at that time little interest in the issue except to keep order and prevent bloodshed. It was for this purpose that he went to the cathedral church, where the election was going on. His appearance produced a momentary calm, when a little child cried out, "Let Ambrose, our governor, be our bishop." That voice, regarded as a voice from heaven, was at once caught up as the slogan of the distraught and deadlocked assembly. The people caught the words and shouted with great enthusiasm. "Yes, Let Ambrose, our governor, be our bishop."

The event was an index of the times and shows the enormous strides the church had made as one of the greatest institutions of power when it is recalled that Constantine had seen the blazing cross only sixty years ago. It was thought a greater honor to be a bishop than a governor. That Ambrose was a layman and not even baptized at the time seemed to be no bar to the office. The history of the times is eloquent of the fact that he was the ablest man for the post to be found in Italy. Selected, not because of his learning or eloquence, but because he was just and virtuous, he nevertheless became eminent as a theologian and was one of the most eloquent defenders of the early faith. Charity allied with poverty was the great test of practical Christianity in those days, and Ambrose met it by scattering his princely fortune among the poor.

But it was in the Arian controversy which involved the divinity of Christ and raged for a hundred years, that he achieved undying fame. It is said of him "that he contributed more than any man who preceded him to raise the power of the bishop as one of the controlling agencies of societies for more than a thousand years."

The Empress Faustina was an open advocate of this sect and her son, Valentinian, a sympathizer and patron. Ambrose did not shun the conflict between principles and practicalities he threw himself with reckless abandon; he, a defenceless priest, defied a powerful emperor with an army at his back. He successfully resisted Caesar on his own ground and resisted him too, not as a martyr, but as a conqueror. He made the bold claim that in all spiritual matters emperors were subordinate to bishops, not bishops to emperors.

And what was the response of the empress, who ruled in the name of her son? The haughty and insolent priest should be exiled, should be imprisoned, should die. But he seeks the shelter of his church and prays to Almighty God. His friends in large numbers resolve to stay with him—die with him if need be. The soldiers surround the spacious basilica in battle array, but dare not enter. Why? Because the church had become a sacred place and "they were afraid of the wrath of God more than the wrath of Faustina of Valentinian." What a striking example of the power of ideas: They lay siege to the place, however, to starve him out or frighten him into surrender. Then it was that the resources of this wonderful man appeared. Day after day, night after night, he stuck to his post. He preached and the people prayed and sang Psalms. History tells us that in that long protracted meeting was instituted the beautiful antiphonal chant of Ambrose which was sung in all the churches and cathedrals of Europe, for over a thousand years.

At last there were signs of rebellion among the soldiers. They hated the job to begin with and were tired and disgusted. Moreover, a new spiritual power was felt even among them. Finally Ambrose conquered, or it would be more proper to say the ideas of Ambrose conquered, but the empress was a woman and if we are to believe the poet "Hell hath no fury like a woman scorned." She renewed the attack again and again and on each succeeding occasion she met a more and more humiliating defeat. At length fearing absolute mutiny among the soldiers the court became alarmed; but it was not until the officers of the palace sided with the bishop that the crestfallen and defeated monarch said in words of bitterness: "I perceive that I am only the shadow of an emperor, to whom you dare dictate my religious beliefs."

Other Roles.
HAM—He was a wise poet who remarked that in this world a man must be either anvil or hammer.
CLAM—Oh, I don't know! It seems that most of them are merely bellows.

CANADIAN WHISKEY IS RAISED AGAIN

Within Two Months an Extra Hundred Per Cent. Profit Added.

Toronto World.
In these days of stress and struggle to earn a living income it is nice to know of a business in which you can increase your profits by over one hundred per cent. in less than two months and no extra cost for manufacturing. This is what the Corby Distillery Co. has accomplished. In December last the price of Corby's whiskey was $15 per case of imperial quarts; today the price is $31, giving the distillers a net of over 100 per cent. extra profit in a period of two months. But that is not the worst of the story. Just a year ago this very same whiskey was sold at the distillery for $13 per case. At today's selling price there is an extra profit in this deal of nearly 140 per cent. It must not be forgotten that all the Corby rye whiskey was presumably manufactured in 1913 or 1914, and at that period the Corby brand was being sold at a very cut rate scale. For instance the reputed quarts (the domestic size) were obtainable at 75 per cent. if one orders a case today it will cost $23.50—a profit of nearly 300 per cent. and the only reasonable extra charge that could be put upon it by the manufacturers would be that of storage and age.

George: I've been trying to figure out how they've got nerve enough to call this Leap Year when all the "heps" are gone.

AN AWFUL QUANDARY
The Visitor: What are you going to name your baby?
The New Mother: Oh, fear, I never knew what a terrible question that could be and I've cried myself sick over it. You see, there's no possible way of knowing what will be the fashionable names in the magazines when he grows up.

CAME NATURAL
She: Do you dance the shimmy?
He: Never but once when I had the ague.

SELF MADE
The Sire: Home again and broke. And when you left you said you were going to make a name for yourself.
The Son: Oh, I've done that, all right. All my friends call me Piggy.
