Inflammatory Rheumatism Cured by B.B.B.

Rheumatism is a constitutional disease, caused by the uric acid in the blood. It manifests itself by pain and lameness attacking the muscles and joints of the body, which often swell and become hot and inflamed.

Anyone who has suffered month after month, and perhaps year after year, with rheumatism, and who has tried remedy after remedy in the hope of relief, and without success, should not give up hope.

Burdock Blood Bitters by invigorating the digestive organs and eliminating the uric acid from the system, will give prompt and permanent relief.

Mrs. D. Barry, Purlbrook, Ont., writes:—"I feel it my duty to let you know of the great benefit my husband derived from using your Burdock Blood Bitters. He had been suffering for the past two years with inflammatory rheumatism. He tried many medicines but got no better. A friend advised him to take B. B. B. He did so, and after taking five bottles he felt like a new man, and was able to go to work the same as ever."

Burdock Blood Bitters has been on the market for over 40 years. Manufactured only by The T. Millburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Two short plays, entitled, "The Blundering Mr. Brown" and "The Teaser" were given. The hall was crowded to capacity. The club held the attention of the large audience for three hours. Each part was well taken. The "On-we-glide" orchestra of Napanee assisted the club with many choice selections. This club has kindly offered by means of concerts to raise money to re-seat the township hall after the contemplated improvements are made.

Miss Lorraine Snider, who has been seriously ill of pneumonia in the Hotel Dieu, Kingston, is improving. It's a great pity that the average man cannot draw a cheque as easily as he can draw an inference.

Englishmen Now Return To Conventional Clothes, Silk Hats and Dress Suits

THE Englishman who did not scruple to appear at the Paris Opera of Sunday evening in a golf jacket and knickers was, in the days before the war and in his own England, notoriously a stickler for dress regulations. These dress regulations, which the rest of the world, the formal part of it, strove to follow, were the Englishman's own invention, and prescribed with a particularity unknown to any other Western nation the proper costume for social appearances at all hours of the day. They gave the gentleman a steady job, the tailors a dependable income, and persons of elegant leisure material assistance in killing time. Some of our own city people had got to be pretty good copies of the Englishman in this respect, but it never was a crime in Canada, except in narrow and exotic circles to break the rules. It was in England.

Naturally the war played havoc with dress conventions along with other peace-time specialties, but now that the war is over, it appears that the Englishman is resolved to take prompt measures to begin looking like himself again, says a writer in the London Daily Mail.

"The edict has gone forth that Guards officers off duty in London have got to wear tall hats and morning coats. Many will rejoice at the decision.

"For some time past our young men have undoubtedly been slack about their clothes. We have even been going to dances and dinner parties in dinner jackets and black ties, with never a thought of a by-your-leave or an apology. And the morning coat and the tall hat have almost ceased to make glad our fashionable promenades.

"Before the war to go to a dance in a dinner jacket was considered to be showing ill manners toward one's host, and it was very unusual to go to dine in anything except the conventional tail-coat and white tie. With the war strict rules for men's dress lapsed. For one thing many men had packed and stored their belongings, leaving behind them to go to dine in anything but a dinner jacket. With these sprang into being a large number of public dancing places to which men went with their own parties and had no host to consider. These dancing places are still with us, and the casual ways of their frequenters linger.

"The Guards' edict, to which I have referred above, will give a lead to many London hostesses who have strong views on the subject of this regrettable slackness in dress. They will now no doubt take the necessary action to insure that the custom we acquired during the war of wearing whatever was most comfortable to us, regardless of the occasion, must cease.

"And the lead of the Guardsmen will be widely followed by other young men about town. Some men will grumble at having to get out their tall coats again, at the increase of laundry bills, at the discomfort of tall hats.

"The other day I heard a man inveighing against the tall-coats on the following grounds. A tall-coat, he said, was considered calmly in the light of its construction—a most useless object. It was a relic of a by-gone time when a man rode a horse-back to visit his friends and needed something to keep the seat of his breeches warm. It was a garment which, like top-hats for cricket, should long ago have been abolished.

"He reasoned my friend, I am not prepared to argue with him. All I would say is that until tall-coats are abolished they may as well be worn on the specified occasions. Never to know when one goes out to a restaurant whether the other men of the party will be wearing black ties or white provided a element of unnecessary uncertainty.

"However, on one point I have strong views. In the days before the war few men of fashion cared to hunt with hounds less they wore pink. A pink coat was derisive among officers of the smarter cavalry regiments.

"There is also a movement on foot to revive this custom. I cannot help thinking that a man who turns out clean and neat shows his respect sufficiently for hounds and that, in these times, the revival of pink coats is a hardship on man; young fellows for whom hunting is none too easy in any case. Pink coats cost 25 guineas each."
