H. W. BORING, a well-to-do Kansas farmer, says he has gained twenty pounds in weight and is in better general health than he has been in years since taking Tanlac.

"Since Tanlac has overcome my troubles I have gained twenty pounds in weight and am in better general health than for years past."

"During the two years I suffered I tried everything I knew of to get relief, but nothing seemed to reach my case until I tried Tanlac."

"My nerves were all unstrung and I would become upset at the least little thing. I seldom slept well at night and, finally, became so weak and run-down that I lost weight rapidly."

"This is just the condition I was in when I began taking Tanlac and it certainly has been a blessing to me. It just seemed to be made especially for my case."

"The pains across my back have entirely disappeared. The catarrh has left me, too, and my head is perfectly clear."

"Tanlac is sold in Kingston by A. P. Chown and by the leading druggists in every town."

Big Suffragette War-Whoop Scares Boy from North Woods

"Votes for women," shrieked a voice right behind Hunting Eye. The boy from the North Woods jumped as though he had been shot. It sounded more like a war-whoop than anything he had heard since coming into the country of the white men.

"What's the matter, my boy?" asked a woman standing near him. "Are you afraid of woman's suffrage?" "No, Ma'am," answered the Indian boy. "I don't know what it is."

"It's the right of women to vote. We have been working for it for a long time now and we think we are about to get it. The woman who scared you is trying to get a crowd gathered around her so she can make them a speech. You see the amendment is up in this state now."

"The amendment?" "Yes, an amendment to the national constitution allowing women to vote. The way it is now the men do all the voting. For a long time, only men with a certain amount of property could vote. People thought, you see, that the persons who paid the taxes should do the voting. In some places also only those men who could read and write could vote. In a number of states even now a man must have a certain amount of education in order to vote."

"Little by little though, the property qualifications for voting, as they called them, were done away with and every man over 21 years of age was allowed to vote. But so far they have never got around to letting the women vote."

"The women of England, the great country across the Big Water, have voted for quite a while now. The women in some of our states can vote for certain offices. But last year we got an amendment through Congress allowing women to vote for all offices. It must be ratified or agreed to by three-fourths of the state legislatures before it becomes a part of the Constitution. That is what we are working for."

Odd and Interesting Facts

The extraordinary durability of the ancient Egyptian mummy cloth is believed to be due to the fact that it was finished with a vegetable glue derived from the African locust-bean tree.

The fairness of the European skin is attributed to some virtue in the suprarenal glands, and all the knowledge we have since gained supports the conclusion formed by John Hunter 150 years ago that the original color of man's skin was black.

Where Widows Actually Wear "Weeds."

Far in the interior of New Guinea the aborigines are as wild as they ever were. Some of the Papuans go head-hunting precisely as they ancestors did hundreds of years ago. So far as civilization is concerned, life in some parts of the New Guinea bush is backward a thousand years. Little, indeed, is known of much of this land, but what is known is interesting.

For instance flitting in and out among the trees and rank vegetation one sometimes sees what looks like the face of a man twice the size of the average Papuan. Closer inspection proves this isn't a face at all. It is a strange head-dress worn by a member of the Otrara tribe, who bears a drum in his hand and is calling from the bush members of his clan to a tribal meeting.

The drum, itself, is interesting. It is long and narrow, is smaller in the centre than at the ends, and is made entirely of wood, except, of course, Spring.

The sun is shining. The birds are flying. Winter is dying. Spring hopes are high.

The robin is coming. Bees soon shall be humming. Then spring hopes may die. Spring hopes go high.

When all seems to be gone, The sun shines long. Things go like a song Spring is coming nigh. Spring is coming nigh. —Jack Campbell, age 11.

Jokes From "Bud". A shoemaker hung out a new sign, and then wondered what passers-by found so amusing. The sign ran as follows: "Don't go elsewhere to be cheated, walk in here."

A schoolmaster asked the highest class to write an essay on "The Result of Laziness," and one of the bright but lazy pupils handed in a blank sheet of paper.

"Is your brother a prize-fighter," said Harry. "No," said Jack, "he's a preacher."

A lady went into a bake-shop and said to the clerk, "Are those buns today?" "Yes," said the clerk. "I asked," said the lady, "because those I bought yesterday weren't." —Bud.

The Whip-Poor-Will.

The whip-poor-will is a native bird of North America, which was so called by its cry resembling the words whip poor will. The length is about ten inches with an alar extent of twenty inches. The plumage is a tawny brown and is much mottled with white and gray spots.

A number of species have been found all of which fly in search of food. They skim along near the ground without making a sound, thus enabling them to catch the insects on which they feed. The bird retires into the woods during the day. Their familiar cry is heard mostly in the evenings. They breed about the middle of May by attaching their eggs in rude nests on or near the ground. —Susan Patterson, Sr. IV, Victoria school.

Some Baseball Views From Victoria.

It may seem a little early to start and talk baseball, but the sight of green grass and the warm sun together with the memory of the defeat given us by Louise last year has given me the baseball fever and I hope the other boys get it soon so that we can get ready to win back the cup this spring.

On account of the entrance being held earlier, this year the league should get together real early and try to get the ball rolling. The weather is generally all right for baseball in April so if the league started the middle of April it could continue for about six weeks to the end of May or June and a double every Monday, Wednesday and Friday after school. Schedule could be played (i.e. each team play each of the other teams twice) which I think would be fair to all and provide more sport.

I believe who have devoted their attention to this subject. But looking at it from the standpoint of the lower steps you may gather some points the head. These drums are prized, for much work is required to fashion them. A suitable log is selected, then in the centre of one end is inserted a glowing coal. By means of a blow pipe the coal is kept lighted and moved around until it gradually burns the wood away. It is a work involving great labor and patience.

One of the oddest customs of these people—this time the Tirio tribe—is the veritable weeds the widows wear. Many of us have been familiar with the name "widow's weeds," but perhaps none until now have learned of anything that fits the name—the weeds of the Tirio women do, precisely.

When her husband dies a Tirio woman discards the dress she has been accustomed to wear. From head to foot she is swathed in coverings or petticoats of grass or of fibre. On her head she wears a platted cap with long streamers that hang to the ground all around. The rustle of the dried weeds, as well as the doleful countenance of their wearer, advertises to the Papuan world that grief has struck to the heart.

Measure Yards Not Rods. Uncle Hal Tells Billy

"Billy, how far is it to the tree on the hill?" "About 80 rods." "Don't you go talking rods to me," said Uncle Hal. "When you talk about distances, talk in yards not rods. You guessed a little under, I should think. I'd say it's about 500 yards."

"You'll get the knack of it with practice though. A good way to learn to estimate distances is the way we learned in the army. Lay out a distance of a hundred yards. Look at it. Look at it often—every time you get a chance. Then when you have to estimate a distance lay off with your eye a series of hundred yard lengths between you and the object to which you are measuring—just as though you were measuring them with a yardstick."

"You want to remember though that as your hundred yard lengths get farther away from you they will seem shorter. So take this into account when you are measuring. After you have made your estimate stride off the distance and see how near you guessed. Do you know what your stride is?" "I don't know," said Billy, who had no idea what his uncle meant by "stride."

"Well, find out. Get somebody to help you measure off a mile. Then walk that mile several times. Try to make your steps all of even length. Count the number of steps you take to the mile each time. From the average you can figure out how many strides you take to a hundred yards."

U.S. CITIZENS BARRED FROM OCEAN TRAVEL

Passports Cannot Be Issued Because State Department Is Without Head.

Washington, March 17.—A virtual embargo on foreign travel by American citizens is in effect with the expiration of the thirty day period during which Undersecretary Polk acted as secretary of state ad interim. No passports were issued at the department to-day, and while no official announcement was made as to the future, it was indicated that none would be issued until the senate had acted on the nomination of Bainbridge Colby to be secretary of state.

Administration officials held that the department technically was without a head and that as passports must be signed by the secretary or acting secretary, none could be issued.

From 600 to 800 passports have been issued daily during the past few weeks, officials said, about sixty per cent. of them to persons going to Europe and twenty per cent. to travelers to Cuba.
