PRINCE BANNED DANCE WHERE NO GIRLS INVITED Even Persuaded His Brothers to Stay Away From the Affair.

London, March 23.—Since returning to London, the popularity of the dashing young Prince of Wales, is increasing by leaps and bounds due to the wonderful success of his visit to Canada and the United States. With the fair sex here, as on the other side, he is a "perfect darling."

As everyone knows, the heir apparent to the British throne cannot do exactly as he likes especially when it comes to picking his own friends among the girls.

Just before his sailing for Australia last Tuesday a private dance was given at Buckingham Palace for young people—mainly in honor of the prince. The prince wanted some of his best girl pals invited and only introduced a list. Whoever it is that handles such matters thought it proper not to invite a single girl named—and, moreover, told the Prince so.

"Well," said the Prince, "count me out too"—and nothing could induce him to attend. Moreover, he persuaded his brothers, Prince Albert and Prince Henry, to stay away with the result that the evening passed in gloom.

A royal parental rebuke followed next morning, but the Prince of Wales respectfully but firmly intimated he intended hereafter to take a stand for liberty in choosing his own friends especially among the girls.
