Buy Fabrikoid Upholstered Furniture

FURNITURE dealers, who give their customers the best possible value and service, sell furniture upholstered in Fabrikoid. These men know that Fabrikoid not only wears longer than leather, but that it costs less and looks better after long use. They realize that they can give Fabrikoid a 100 per cent guarantee, because Fabrikoid is built exclusively for such service.

And Fabrikoid cannot be told from leather in appearance—it's color, the grain, the texture and other details are such that it is often mistaken for leather, but there the comparison ends. Fabrikoid is a fabric with a coating that is impervious to grease or water, is more durable than leather, yet is soft and pliable, is sanitary, and above all more economical.

Insist on Fabrikoid upholstery. Your dealer will supply it.

Our book, "Fabrikoid in the Home," tells about Fabrikoid and gives many useful hints about how it can be used in the home. Write for your free copy today.

Most of the motor cars in Canada today are upholstered or topped with Fabrikoid.

LOVE and MARRIED LIFE by the noted author Idah McGione Gibson

John Sees a New Light.

Before Hannah reached me, they told me afterward, I had become unconscious and I was mercifully spared all the details of my mother's funeral.

My first conscious moment came the next evening when I heard John, Alice and the doctor talking.

"I do not quite understand," said John, "why my wife is so apt to collapse on the slightest provocation."

"Do you call what she has just passed through a 'slight provocation'?" asked Alice sarcastically.

"No," answered John, more meekly than I had ever heard him speak; "but up until the motor accident and the loss of her baby she has always seemed in such radiant health."

Not a Quick Recovery.

"A woman does not recover quickly from shocks like that," said the old doctor; "in fact I have known a few leave some of them invalids for life."

"Surely, you have not the idea that Katherine will be left in such a condition?"

"No sir, but I do think that she should be left here in this quiet place until she has recovered."

"Oh, I am sorry," exclaimed Alice and John simultaneously.

"You see," continued John, "I had hoped to take her home, perhaps with a nurse, at the end of the week."

"That would be madness," emphatically spoke the doctor; "if you should do such a thing as that I would not answer for her reason or her life."

I felt myself smiling, for I could not believe that I was in the dangerous condition the doctor described. Inwardly I was glad of his decision that I remain in the little old home place.

"Well," said Alice, "I see no reason why Katherine should not stay here. The town will be really beautiful in the springtime and the house and income going with it will be hers now, I suppose."

I could not help feeling more content with my lot, as I remembered for the first time that this house, which had belonged to my mother, would in the future belong to me, and that I would inherit a small income that would make me independent of John.

Pretends to be Asleep.

The doctor came to my bed and I pretended to be asleep. He placed his hand on my forehead for a moment and evidently listened to the coming and going of my breath, and then he tiptoed through the open door where John and Alice were sitting.

"The crisis is passed," he said. "When she wakes she will be conscious again. All she needs now is rest, good air and no worries, and these she can get right down here with the people who have always loved her."

The dear old doctor bade Alice and John good-night and left the room. He had hardly closed the door when John turned to his sister and said:

"Look here, Alice, don't encourage Katherine in staying down here too long. She will be much better off at home with me, and I am sure she will recover much quicker."

"Not if you treat her as you have been doing," said Alice decisively.

"Why, I have always treated her right except when I have lost my temper."

"That's it, John, only when you have lost your temper, and you have lost your temper over such little things while you were frequently asking her to forgive some pretty big ones."

"Well, there is one person I will not forgive, and that is Karl Shepard. You know I consider he has very nearly broken up my home, and sometimes I think you aided and abetted him, Alice."

Very Much in Love.

"I have," was Alice's serene reply, "and it is probably no news to you, John, that Karl Shepard is very much in love with your wife, and I think he would make her a much better husband than you do."

"Alice, does any woman think there are any good husbands?" John asked angrily.

"Yes, a few, and I have one of them," answered Alice suavely.

"But you and Tom never acted as though you were greatly in love with each other."

"No, and we never acted as though we hated each other. We are just pals, old dear, just pals."

"Perhaps that is the secret," said John slowly, as he came toward my bed.

The Saddest News. London Tit-Bits.

Holding the fair young maid close to him, the man gazed into the unfathomable depths of her limpid eyes.

Acute anxiety was expressed in every line of her innocent face. Ever and anon a sigh seemed to rend her being with its intensity and she looked in his face as though she would read his very soul.

For many minutes thus they stood. Neither spoke, but each gazed—gazed intently—into the other's eyes.

"Yes," said the oculist, at last, "one eye is severely affected, and, if not treated immediately, may develop a decided squint."

Public Criticism. The Watchman-Examiner.

Good, absent-minded, old Dr. Wilder was greatly dependent upon his practical wife. One morning Mrs. Wilder sent up an announcement after he had entered the pulpit with a footnote intended to be private.

"The Women's Missionary Society," he read aloud, "will meet Wednesday afternoon, at three o'clock sharp. Your necktie is crooked; please straighten toward the right."

Uncle Zeke's Philosophy. Youth's Companion.

"Yist'day," says Uncle Zeke, "Ah drapped foah cents on de foah, an' dey made a big racket. Ef dey had er in foah dollar bills nobody would 'a' heard 'em drap. People is jes' lak money; dem dat make de mos' noise ain't a liike of de mos' account."

A strike, which tied 7,000 employees of Chicago packing houses, was settled on Thursday, when the men agreed to arbitration.
